

moving units

PlayStation®2

OLYMPUS

Your Vision, Our Future

copyright - the side effects of urethane - "moving units" 2004

p: 1

Book

ART GOES STREET

BEAUTIFUL LOSERS: CONTEMPORARY ART, SKATEBOARDING AND STREET CULTURE
Edited by Aaron Rose and Christian Strick
Published by DAP/Rizzoli, £27.50
Reviewed by Francesco Guarni

Once upon a time there were kids across the world who liked to mess about with pictures, simply because they enjoyed it. These little pockets of friends, hanging on street corners or skating in local parks, grew up – and their pictures grew with them. In the past decade, street art has moved off the pavement. People like Barry McGee, Gil Tempesta and Chris Johanson are no longer small cult artists, but big names, attracting shows in serious spaces.

Beautiful Losers is the largest touring exhibition devoted to 50 of these keenly collected artists. Aaron Rose, who runs the Alleged gallery in New York, curated the project, bringing together precursors like Jean Michel Basquiat and Larry Clark, historical icons such as Spike Jones, Mike Mills and Miles Gonzales, and recent young guns like Geoff McFetridge and Ryan McGuinness. This work is inspiring – and looks increasingly important.

Many of the artists come out of skate culture. Yet the relationship is not obvious and there is almost no reference to skateboarding in these works. It's much more about, as Rose puts it, 'an attitude of creativity, innovation, reflectiveness and poetry'. Probably the most unifying trait is a DIY approach. To Mark Foster, UK artist and founder of Hems Skateboards, skating 'is the sum of the creative process. It forces you to be imaginative.'

The essence of street skating is about looking at the city in a different way, as something to interact with, rather than passively experience. Kids brought up on a diet of skating camps and searching the streets for new places to skate take that into their art. It's about taking elements from the detritus of contemporary culture and transforming them. These are Warhol's grandchildren.

The exhibitions themselves also have an inventive, homemade edge. Richard Holland is creative director of media design company Bullet Clip and exhibition curator at Waterloo skate shop C2E. The main aim was to create a space that gave artists a chance to exhibit their work. 'I wanted the gallery to have a more relaxed feel to it,' he explains. C2E has had 18 shows in as many months. Artists included Banksy, Future winner Toby Patterson, James Jarvis, Shepherd Fairey and illustrator Lo Razzfitti.

The relationship between art and skating is natural. To Holland, skateboarding is an art in itself. Most physical sports are about winning; skateboarding is not. Just like art, each person has a unique style and way of tricks. You could take 50 skaters to the same place and each one would do something different in their own style.

Holland, along with Marcus Oakley, Willoughby and Toby Shuard, is behind the London collective The Side Effects of Urethane. Its 'sole purpose is to explore and promote the symbiotic relationship between skateboarding and art, photography, design and architecture,' he says. Much of its events has included art works and some form of architecture for skating, which crosses the boundaries of design, installation and fun. In its latest project, Moving Units, 'we started talking about perpetual motion,' explains Shuard. 'We thought about making the most area move like an installation of sculptures. We wanted to where things to be white – so the wheels would lose their marks, creating a pattern.'

BEAUTIFUL LOSERS

CONTEMPORARY ART & STREET CULTURE

What makes the fresh creativity of the artists coming from the scene as surprising is that the mainstream commodification of underground culture isn't narrowing their creative options. It is often irrelevant – skate culture may be mainstream, but there are still a large number of smaller companies with a graphic sensibility that want to do something different.

This outlook didn't come out of nowhere. The experimentation of people in the Seventies, when skating as we know it began to form, feeds into the creative pool. Today's artists still pay respect to those that came before them for pushing the boundaries. Foster gives an example: 'Bouquet was a very heavy influence on the Gotic. [Mark Gonzales]. He made everyone realize there was no rules.'

Skateboarding is only a part of the culture. As Aaron Rose clarifies: 'We are talking about a vast movement, reaching into almost every creative medium, that is rooted in our attitude. This homegrown, DIY approach to art not only reflects the thoughts of these particular artists, but millions of young people worldwide.'

Reviews

Photo: recueilli par Guillaume Le Goff. Photo: Maxime Zelenka et Cie

I-FOS MOVING UNITS

Le skateboard rencontre l'art et l'architecture

"The Side Effects of Urethane" est un jeune collectif créatif qui éveille à Londres. Venu du siège, ces activistes ont dédié leur vie à l'exploration de la relation symbiotique entre skateboard, art, photographie, design et architecture. Aboutissement moderne cristallisant cette ingénue réflexion, ils ont organisé en solo "Moving Units", un événement de taille en plein cœur de la capitale britannique, réparti dans plusieurs lieux selon leur nature [art] peinture, sculpture, musique, projections, retrospective à la galerie-streetshop Clic/Off/Gallery...]. Un livre "synthèse" est même en préparation. Clark se devait d'être là ! Rencontre avec deux des initiateurs de "Moving Units", Rich Holland et Marcus Gately.

Où vient l'idée de l'événement "Moving Units" à Londres ?

Rich : Nous sommes tous des "unités mobiles", mais certaines d'entre-nous bougent plus que d'autres. "Moving Units" traduit le concept de ce projet. Nous avons créé une série de sculptures établies en béton - ces unités sont toutes désignées par des skateurs, pour des plateaux, et certaines peuvent intéresser le grand public ou bien servir de beau mobilier de rue, un autre de leurs objectifs recherchés.

Marcus : Cette année nous voulions disperser l'événement dans différents lieux de Londres... Comme nous avions toujours tout fait en un seul endroit auparavant - la première fois en novembre 2001, dans une vieille usine à confiture, puis la deuxième fois en mai 2003, dans une école victorienne désaffectée.

Comment s'est passé l'événement cette année ?

Marcus : D'abord, précisons que nous sommes 3 organisateurs principaux, à savoir Rich Holland [Graphiste, Directeur Artistique / Producteur], Marcus Gately [Graphiste, Conservateur], Toby Shual [Skateur pro, Coordinateur de la production]. "Moving Units" a été scindé en 5 parties : 1. Exposition (avec entre autres James Jarvis, Pete Fowler, Benjamin Deberdt, Ben Bonabury, Jo Ratcliffe, Simon True, Javier Mendiabat, Toby Patterson...) ; 2. Retrospective ; 3. Projection du documentaire de Weston Whittaker sur le skate britannique "Roller through the decades" ; 4. Soirées avec groupes et DJs ; 5. Installation de sculptures établies à South Bank [musique, spot de skate sous un pont à Waterloo, dans le centre de Londres à côté de la gare, ndlr]. Pour la première fois l'exposition s'est déroulée dans un espace de galerie conventionnel, qui comprend une boutique où l'on trouvait des T-shirts, des t-shirts, des posters, des livres et des affiches réalisées par les artistes. Le but de l'exposition, inspirée par les "magazines de châts" scandinaves, était de monter une expo qui ne ressemblait pas à une expo de gars-lès au skateboard... une expo qui montre la diversité créative que l'on trouve dans la culture street. A propos des structures établies, nous voulons dans un premier temps - avant que South Bank ne soit détruit - faire quelque chose, ajouter des trucks peut-être, et ainsi améliorer ce qu'il y avait déjà. Cette année, dans un deuxième temps, nous voulons placer ces sculptures établies sur le spot de manière à montrer comment les skateurs re-déploient l'espace urbain pour autre chose que le freestyle, le shopping ou les autres activités urbaines divertissement et consommation. Pour les skateurs les villes deviennent des « terrains de jeu » à explorer sans fin et sur lesquels on peut se confronter à soi-même. Les sculptures ont été spécialement commandées par "The Side Effects of Urethane" auprès d'artistes et de skatabordeurs de renom, afin de satisfaire les besoins variés des skateurs et des autres usagers de l'espace public. Les pièces sont des éléments fonctionnels aux formes hautement sculpturales. De façon générale l'événement c'est très bien déroulé - nous avons eu des retours positifs, et nous avons tiré une relation avec South Bank, ce qui ne peut que être une bonne chose.

D'après vous quelles sont les liens spécifiques et récents entre l'art et le skateboard ?

Marcus : Elle est dure celle-là ! Mais bon... L'acte de skater est, malheureusement, non productif au sens économique, alors qu'il attire des mommets en termes d'activités créatives et d'expérimentation. Le skateboard redéfinit et modifie l'espace urbain. De nombreux skateurs sont inspirés par l'énergie positive liée à l'activité « skate ». et à ses racines associées et culturelles africaines... c'est pourquoi ils croient de l'art, du sport, de la musique, des films, de la littérature, etc.

Des projets maintenant ?

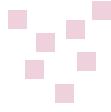

Rich : Nous travaillons sur le livre pour "The Side Effects of Urethane", il regroupera les 3 derniers événements. Nous voulons également montrer des exemples de la manière dont les skateurs visualisent la ville comme un immense espace établi : l'essence de leur perception du milieu urbain... Parce qu'il est unique. Le regard que l'on a sur une ville se traduit dans n'importe quelle autre activité créative... puisque l'espace du caractère est également extrêmement différent. Je vais d'ailleurs bientôt à North Sea avec mon ami Toby Shual pour construire une mini-ramppe et un bowl en béton dans le jardin d'un mec - www.shualgo.com

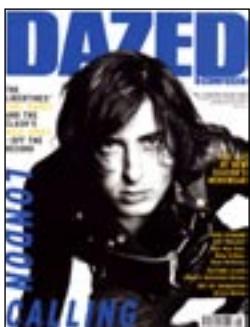

Marcus : Nous travaillons aussi avec les institutions britanniques pour - nous l'espérons - amener « Moving Units » dans d'autres villes d'Europe ainsi que prochain. Pourquoi pas à Paris ? Restez à l'écoute de Clark...

Pour en savoir plus : www.movingunits.co.uk

PRESS MOVING UNITS
CLARK - OCTOBER - 2004

HUNG & DRAWN

TEXT IPHIGENIA BAAL

MOVING UNITS

Celebrating the evolution of skateboarding, the MOVING UNITS exhibition takes skate art back to the streets.

Since the 70s, skateboarding has been a significant component of urban culture, using the city for something other than it was intended and stirring a subtle form of rebellion in the process. Since then skateboarding has evolved and affiliated itself with all sorts of artistic and cultural exploits, creating a vast sub-culture that includes music, magazines and distinct fashions.

Moving Units is a group of events taking place in August that will explore the relationships between skateboarding and the arts. The event hopes to highlight the diversity of work that has emerged from both new and established names from the UK skateboarding scene from the dark, under-stylised drawings of Richard Sayer to the more design-based prints from artists like Adam Neate.

As part of the show, ten interactive sculptures will appear on the hallowed Southbank concrete and other renowned skateparks around London. The installations have been designed by skateboarders for skateboarders and serve a dual purpose, as both art and "obstacles". Accompanying the exhibitions is a retrospective, including behind the scenes footage and documentation following the creation of the skate ramp. The NFT are also involved, showing Rollin' Through The Decades, a film documenting skateboarding from its neon epidemic in the 80s to the multi-million dollar industry it is today. An accompanying book will come out next year.

MOVING UNITS TAKES PLACE FROM AUGUST 8-25. CHECK WWW.MOVINGUNITS.CO.UK FOR MORE INFORMATION.

Richard Sayer

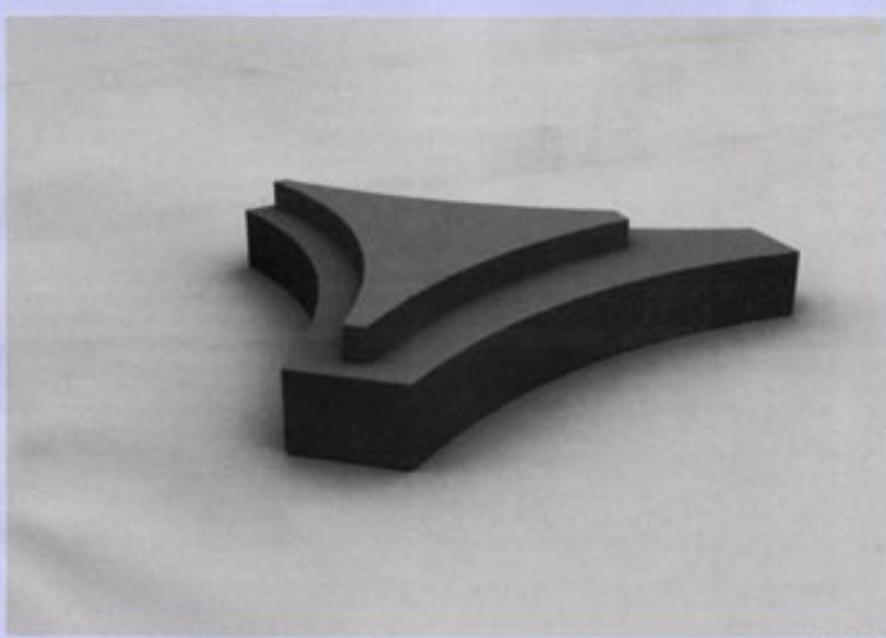

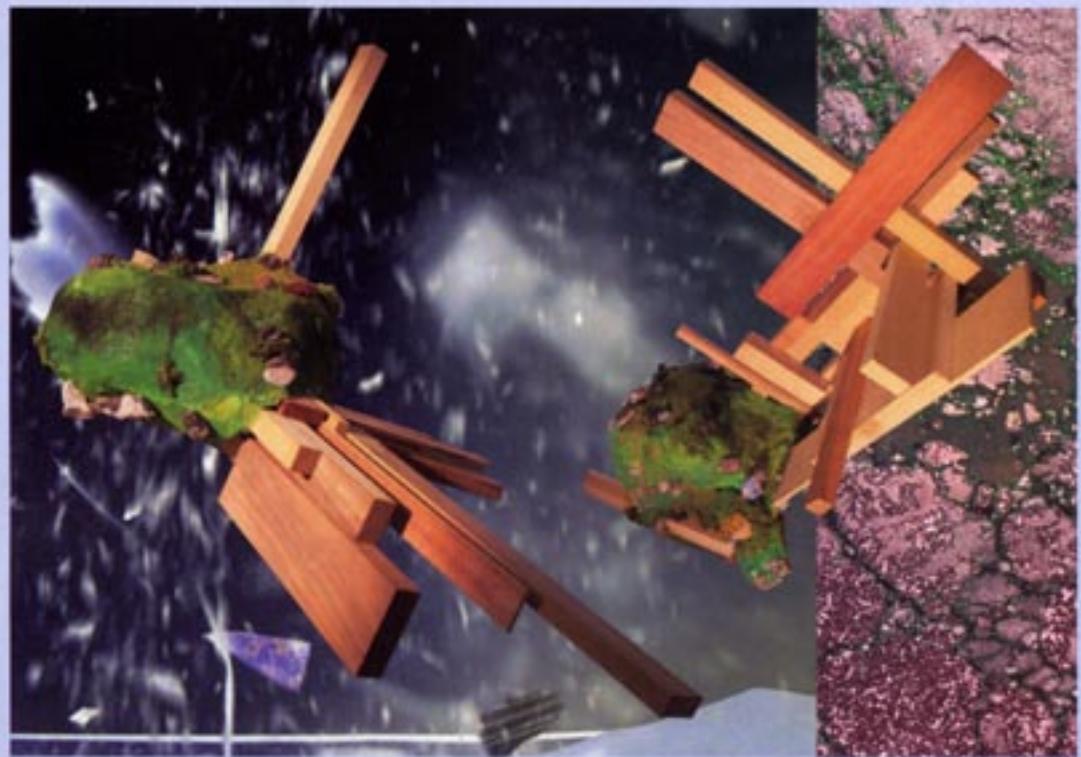

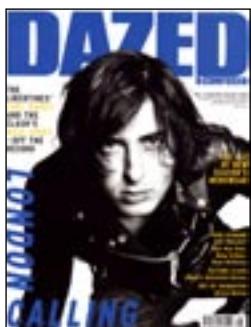

Nick Taylor

Simon True

PRESS MOVING UNITS
DAZED - AUGUST - 2004

DAZED & CONFUSED 191

copyright - the side effects of urethane - "moving units" 2004

p: 6

PRESS MOVING UNITS
DOCUMENT SKATEBOARDING - AUGUST - 2004

Liarsnewsstuff

Moving Units

The Side Effects of urethane

Moving Units
The Side Effects of urethane

The Side Effects of Urethane group are rolling into the summer with a new exhibition entitled Moving Units! An exhibition featuring artwork and history of the Side Effects events opens at Cide from the 11th-21st August 2004. And most interestingly is the Temporary Skate Sculptures project: Five skateable objects have been designed, and are being cast from concrete as we speak. These will then be dropped from the 6th of July all over London's city centre. I repeat; these are all skateable structures, some of the designs are featured here. They are to be placed at South Bank, Shell Centre and at other un-declared locations in the city. Keep your eyes peeled or phone Cide for details!

HERE: Side Effects Of Urethane group have a new agenda, temporary skate sculptures in the city of London will be being created in from this month. I know it sounds too good to be true so email rich@bulletclip.com for more info.

Welsh

Well, 1-4 we do I need a good holiday or what after spending five months with Daftton, Pancha and Joycey filming this second series of Sanctified. Don't get me wrong, it was one of the best laughs I've had in a long time but the constant travelling, losing, lack of sleep and constantly mending your back does get to you after a while, but I wouldn't change it for the world. Good memories and stories as long as my two arms. If anyone has seen some of the shows already then I hope you've enjoyed them, but if you haven't it's on Wednesday's 11pm on MTV and repeated on Fridays and Sundays.

Good news for everyone in the Bridgend area, the years indoor bowling hall has opened again for the summer season. If anyone out there from further a-field fences going then contact Justin and his army at Bad Habits skate shop for information. Over the last few years the courses have been perfect so I should imagine most of the same.

Daftton has just come back from the Death tour and told me he had a right laugh. I didn't make it as I've done the ligaments in my ankle whilst climbing in Antwerp plus I needed to tell my boss. A week with Catesy working is enough to drive the sanest person nuts, but it was good to see Cates, Zorlac, Calowes and all the boys when they visited Cardiff though. The Squadrophobic video was well sick with a load of good sections plus look out for Dibbles's cool when he's turning up the beach, it's enough to get even the hardened pom star running for cover.

After the premier of the Squad video our very own Cashmen decided to join the tour for their last leg in Cornwall the next day and what happened next is unpredictable. Apparently they all went out on the beach in Newquay and Cashmen being Cashmen kicked a load of power tools from someone's back shed, then set the bloody thing on fire causing a load of trouble (remember everyone, Cashmen has ADD) and obviously picking a few of the team off as they had to sleep on the beach because of it. Anyways, the hell day Cashmen is still his hyper self driving back home and obviously passed Cates off that much that Cates hit him that hard he broke Cashmen's nose (duh!). Apparently it's all been sorted between them now and they've kissed and made up.

On another Cashmen note he has been doing a bit of modelling for Clark's shoes and H&M clothing so look out for him in your local high street store soon, and look out modelling agencies cause you have a right sonic on your hands.

The man himself Lee Daftton is organizing a huge K8 City tour for August time, which will be done in Europe. The tour will be over three weeks and will be visiting all the major spots dotted around Europe itself. Daftton will be buying a huge Transit van and will be using his carpentry skills to turn it into a mobile mini bed & breakfast for the team to live in, more riders, and possible stop offs as the months go by. Other K8 City news is that the passed wobbles, "I can't spear properly" Pancha is about to have his new pro board in the shop soon, so go buy it and help him feed his habit. Little Micky has now left school and is not little Micky anymore, just like all the little sisters from the past who have been stuck with this title before their name but it's hard to shrug off. He will now be named Micky Connell. To simple reasons that he's now tall as 1-4, and just remember who is always getting stuck into sessions with the big boys when every other 1-4 is shitting themselves. Nuff said. Check this space.

As some of you will already know Cardiff skaters has closed its doors for the last time. Thanks once again to the entry compensation culture, which those fers have got us all into and ring insurance for the upkeep of our private skateparks has caused the inevitable. I'm sure every skaterboarder who ever attended the park in the past would like to thank Gareth and Jane for a load of good memories. You can't get a good man down though 'cause don't forget Gareth still designs/builts skateparks all over the place, and if you need a park done in your local town then contact City Surf or Freestyle.

I've just received some goodshocking news that Neil Maggots from Newport has been offered his own show on Channel 4 doing Sanctified stunts. I don't know how true this is as I've not spoken to the man himself, but will let you know next month. If it is true then they have found a perfect icon to do it and I wish him all the luck. Oh god, Maggots on the TV...

Congrats to Irish man and one good egg of a photographer Ricky Gudgen who recently passed his photography degree at Newport college. His work was so good that he has been offered a grant to do his own skate photography exhibition; we'll keep you all up to date on that and let you know where it's to be.

I would like to finish my notes by thinking Dykey aka Ray Chopper from Coronation Street (squeaky) for doing my Water news over the last few months whilst I've been away touring. On another Dykey note he went on a little mini tour with Jason Perret and Tommy to visit Tony Da Silva to film for the upcoming East video. As they arrived in Liverpool (keep in mind Dykey is driving) it's meant to take an hour to find Tony's house but Dykey got lost for four hours. In the process he had four football hooligans jump on his bonnet and his car drives like a ton of bricks to get them off. Then Jason and Tommy are trying to give her directions saying "right, left, no it's right, no it's straight on" causing Dykey to have a full on panic attack (laughed) and shout his head off at them in a shaking mess. After having a tag the doesn't smoke either he managed to calm down and realized he's allergic to Red Bull. I wish I were there to witness that. The粗eness of Frank Spencer and the looks of Ray Chopper, but Dykey is a star. By the way, when he got home he managed to knock his wing mirror off too.

On a last note I would like to congratulate my good friend Baillie who I've stayed with for years and his future wife Annalise on the birth of their little baby boy Luka and their engagement. Bring on the stag night boy!

Enjoy the summer everyone.

—Prichard

PRESS MOVING UNITS
DOCUMENT SKATEBOARDING - OCTOBER - 2004

Swallow This!
A NEW EXHIBITION OF PAINTINGS BY REV. GREET

SHOWING AT:
PHYSICAL POETRY TO THE CRESCENT
HIVE PARK CORNER,
LEEDS
LS2 2BW
(0113) 223 0405

OPEN MON-SAT 12-6pm
www.physicalpoetry.com

EAST

Liarsnews+stuff.

Moving Units

The language that people apply to art is bizarre, whether in terms of its appreciation or its production.

Keep a journal detailing your verbal and visual responses to the exhibitions you attend. Try and think of this process as a journey ... Produce your first work using a wide range of appropriate media.

That's why Moving Units was good. The third instalment of The Side Effects of Urethane felt fresh because it was nothing to do with art itself, while the fact that very, very few of the things on display in the gallery felt like they were there solely by virtue of having been produced by people connected with skateboarding meant that it didn't feel like a collection of "skate art". This was the common ground for sure, the exhibition's background context, but no one was on display simply because they could draw a little.

Nor were there cards attached below each collection of work explaining its maker's choices of materials, colours and form, and its underlying pseudo-psychological significance.

It just all looked real. Si Pepple's pictures of random things, French's intricately brutal drawings, Senn's raw prints. Fier's work CLOSE YOUR EYES AND THINK OF BURLEY. Everything else.

Meanwhile, at South Bank just meanwhile, Moving Units' other aspect was in evidence, in situ – more of that rubbery agency blocks that both looked interesting and skated well (aside from the early chipping problem) in an area marked out for skaters. South Bank taking a different tack in regard to skating was good, although it wasn't as pleasing to see how readily they took media attention for sureness. They might have covered the insurance, but those blocks were designed, produced and paid for by the skaters, by Moving Units' digression.

This was a dope event: art, available objects, and no mention whatsoever, anywhere, of milieu, mark-making, magnum opera, or any of that nonsense.

English'ish

This month saw a fleeting and almost unheralded visit from the full US Nike SB team; every single one of them (apart) not only did they skate but they were also able to take in an Arsenal game from the refined surroundings of a private box, organised by Burnie Self. Chas was there, turning his last cubes as a member of Skatewell's staff; he's now chief times, team manager and so on for Blueprint Skateboards, and has taken to writing press releases that he expects to be quoted verbatim; he's going to tell me.

Paul Shear is currently in Transylvania, yes, the home of The Count. He's currently on a trip through Bulgaria and Romania where he's filming with Josh 'Sheaf' Stewart for Lost and Found; let's just hope Dracula hasn't mixed out all those spuds.

Danny Brady is actually working for a living, although given the amount of skating establishments in Blackpool it can't be that hard to get a job there. Bernard Manning plays at Brady's place of employment on Saturday afternoons: if you go, avoid Brady: "If he pulls a trap pint," Blueprint's ten-minute tour went down last month. Neil Smith, Colin Kennedy, Vaughan Baker, Nick Jensen, Scott Palmer and Mike Wright made up the numbers. Traversing the length and breadth of the Western Islet, a geographical area Chas concudes he made up himself, they took in Brighton, Bournemouth, Worthing, Bath and Bristol. (They're able to win the 'Print vs. Cléché demo – of course I'm sure both teams would say that), before finally ending up in Cardiff.

Racing for Lost and Found is keeping everyone busy: "Blame is bang on it, when not recovering from football injuries, Mike Wright is so hot right now (God I hate that saying). Scott Palmer is in Prague on his honeymoon, as is Chevy Cannon. Not with Scott you jockey, he's on a separate trip with shop sponsor Hoax. Vaughan Baker has fit London, so look out for him knocking about. It's sad to report the death of Meadow Manchester; it's always sad to see a state-owned shop go under. Weston is of course still going strong in Leeds and Huddersfield, while back in Marc's Notts are holding things down for the SOS brigade. Support these people.

In more positive Manchester news a new park has opened up below the Manchester Way, from the capable hands of the Fearless team. It features a slope-scooping selection of obstacles, including a wet wall, Huntington Beach-style rip and a Per 7 Manly Pad. I'm looking forward to seeing John Igou, Rob Wiesen, Mike York and the rest of them travelling en masse through the rain to make that last one now that the new thing is gone.

Bones Bolton is now owned by someone who isn't a "nightmare business man", and they've now got a cinema room, fully-stocked shop, a pool table and all that messney; November also sees the beginning of a series of All Nighters, to take place on the first Friday of every month. The inaugural session will feature Darton and the KID City boys, and no doubt at that that entails. That's on the 11th. On the 3rd of December Wings is bringing some OG Distribution people, while Justin Ashton and the Pig City team will feature on the 7th in the New Year. You know the deal: Revolution Skatepark in Kent is putting on a comp: Weapons Of Mass Destruction. Taking place between 12 and 4 on Sunday the 31st of September, there are three categories, novice, intermediate and open, and it's £3 to skate, £5 to spectate.

Don't forget that this House comp is going on the 18th of September. Unabomber and Gants have been added to the sessions.

I forgot to say last time that the forthcoming Heroin Skateboards video should be called Lost In Antwerp; watch out for it because you know it's going to be rad.

—Jacob B

Scottish

Well this month seemed to last forever, I was supposed to go away to do heaps of pictures and stuff and it pretty much all fell through. To console myself, probably more so to occupy myself, I've been getting tattoos. Chris has been winding me up, calling me batfy this and batfy that, saying it's all jazziness and pretty boy stuff, but we'll have it. I've got a complete row of teeth so when I'm laughing now, eh?

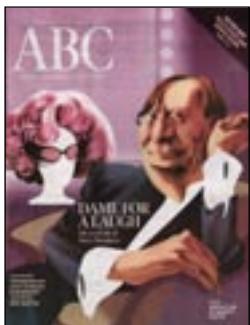

On yeah and I diagnosed myself as having Alcohol-induced Narcolepsy, not to be confused with Alcohol-induced Remorancy, that's just stuff, you ever tried digging when you're pissed as a horse?

Edinburgh News:

In case you live in a cave you'll know that the Cléché boys as well as some Skrewers were spotted floating about Lothian and surrounding areas dodging the rain and signing things for kids.

I received a couple of phone calls from a severely interested

28 DOCUMENT OCTOBER 2004

THE INDEPENDENT ON SUNDAY | 15 AUGUST 2004

ABC | 3

ABC

15 August 2004

Cover Illustration by Andi Carillo

6-15 FEATURES

COVER STORY

He wears silk pyjamas. And he owns Oscar Wilde's telephone book. Andrew Barrow discovers these and other great secrets about Barry Humphries next 6

THE REEL THING

Another week, another director's cut. But are any of them worth watching, asks Mike Higgins next 15

POSING FOR PEACE

Mark Irving explores representations of diplomacy in art next 15

16-27

THE CRITICS

THEATRE

Kate Bassett on The Blood Father and more from the Edinburgh Fringe next 15

FILM

Jonathan Rottenby on the Korean thriller Murderers of Murder, plus Nicholas Refett on The Bourne Supremacy next 15

CLASSICAL

Ariane Mnich on a superlative Joyful at Glyndebourne next 15

ART

Charles Darwent on 'The Age of Titian' at the National Gallery of Scotland next 15

COMPACT DISCS

The week's top releases reviewed, including Charlotte Hazeley's 'Tin Hat' title, Handel, Moby Deep... next 15

BOX OFFICE

The charts: who's selling what next 15

28-35

BOOKS

REVIEWS

Justin Hill: how I turned the life of the Chinese poet Li Bai into a novel. Plus Rebecca Pearson on Heather Styron's debut novel, Juliana Hart on Occidentalis, Building a Library (on Ancient Iraq), and Paperbacks next 15

NEW FICTION

An extract from The Blackpool Highflyer by Andrew Martin next 15

37-53

TV & RADIO

The week's television previewed and seven-day TV and Radio listings next 15

REGULARS

STEPHEN BAILEY

Secret chatter - who needs it? next 5

DAVID THOMSON

On Fay Wray's last screen. next 15

THIS CULTURAL LIFE

Novelist G P Taylor on why he loves his teddy and hates pugs. next 15

TALK OF THE TOWN

Openings, closings, people and places

LEFT BANK

Gnarly sculptures, dude

If the Hayward Gallery has no permanent collection, Musicians come and go in the Purcell Room. Seasons wax and wane in the National Film Theatre. Only one attraction is constant at the South Bank Centre: the skateboarders.

"I came to work at South Bank in 1985 and the skaters have been here since the Seventies," says Miles McCarr, the commercial director of the South Bank Centre. "The Queen Elizabeth Hall undercroft is ideal for skating: it's 'slack' space, covered, lit, with slopes and smooth surfaces. And management's attitude has changed over the past 20 years. At first, it was a constant battle: surfaces were pebbledashed, fences put up and security guards employed."

Some of these tensions were the result of the South Bank Centre's intolerance, but others were necessary. "At one point the skaters used a staircase that backs on to the Purcell Room, and the noise they made interrupted recitals inside." Recently, however, the war of attrition between skaters and arts administrators ended, with the arrival in 2002 of the current chief executive of the South Bank Centre, Michael Lynch.

One reason for this détente is that Lynch skates, dude. Or at least he did until he contracted polio as a boy in Australia in the Sixties. McCarr adds that his boss (who used to run Sydney Opera House) "had a much broader view of cultural centres and their role in the community and skaters have as much right to use the South Bank as anyone else". This new relationship has been formalised with several initiatives. The latest, with the London skater collective The Side Effects of Urethane, is the installation of five concrete "skate sculptures" last week in the undercroft, the traditional skate spot in the shadows beneath Queen Elizabeth Hall.

Each sculpture is a geometric form, cast in concrete, about eight feet long, and painted white. Individually, they recall, perhaps, Rachel Whiteread's work (one might have been cast under a park bench, another under a sought-after chair); they resemble pieces of monumental masonry, as if the South Bank Centre were crashing into the Thames. But you could call them plinths, too, as skater after skater jumps on to them and strikes a brief, heroic pose before clattering on to the paving.

Chris, a 16-year-old who comes up from

Geometric, monumental, plinth-like: the new sculptures for skaters on the South Bank who kicks off with an authentically servile introduction.

Mrs Woolf has just published To the Lighthouse, and it seems extraordinarily plucky for this most private of writers to go on the festival trail to promote it. She reads beautifully from the opening and closing chapters, then settles down to be grilled by the chair.

Mrs Woolf is in a garrulous mood, though she does have a tendency to approach the questions from an oblique angle. She talks about her writing life, she discusses an impenetrable sounding volume The Waves. (I wonder if she'll sign her booklist after the show?) She talks movingly about her mother, who died when she was young, and whose spirit permeates the new novel. She spellbindingly relates two of her earliest memories: of being in bed in the nursery at Talland House in St Ives, hearing the beat of the sea and watching the acrobatic gulls in the blind moving in the breeze; and of a child's up-close focus on the pattern of her mother's dress as she unspooled up to her on a train, perhaps on the way to St Ives.

Woolfians will have smell + see, these two anecdotes appear word for word, in Virginia's own memoirs. This "conversation" has been cunningly woven together from Woolf's diaries and letters, which explains why she isn't actually responding to the questions. It's an enthralling hour, which covers a great deal of biographical ground and reintroduces us to the woman's extraordinary

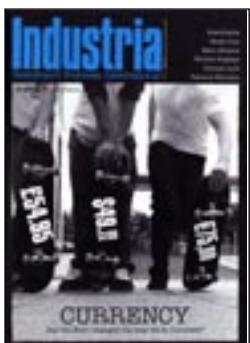

A LECTURE HALL OF ONE'S OWN

Mrs Woolf reads again

Tonight, ladies and gentlemen, we have a very special literary treat for you. Just how often do you get the chance to see Virginia Woolf herself in conversation?

There's a flurry of applause, a piano introduction, and here she is, tall and elegant, walking on to the stage of the Great Hall at Dartington. She looks apprehensive, fidgety. The clothes are long and droopy: the hair is in a bun - though rather blonder than I'd have expected. She nods a timid yes to a glass of water. This is being played utterly straight, complete with a slightly bumbling chair, from Lethbridge,

12 News

UNITED KINGDOM

WAY OUT STEREO

Stereo hosts a London exhibit.

Jason Lee and Chris Peterson passed through London in May, along with Stereo team riders Chris Peterson, Keegan Snyder, and Benji Purdon, to raise public awareness about the birth of Stereo skateboards with a group art show called "Way Out East."

The two-day exhibit was held in a gallery space on Kingland Road in Shoreditch, featuring the work of Tobi Yeland, Beth Niemeyer, Jason Lee, Chris Peterson, Chris Peterson and Stereo's new art director, Matt Irving, also in attendance.

Rich Holland, co-owner of London's CIDE skateboard shop and owner of the BBB gallery, attended the exhibit. "It was nice that a celebrated Stereo from its conception, he says.

The gallery's front room showcased new work while much reminiscing went on in the back room where many of the old graphics were on display. The show was sponsored by Stereo, Soco, Bedlam Union, and WE.

A twenty-after party followed where the band Mistake played to happily mirthful crowds.

WARRIOR BRANDS

Distributor picks up new brands.

Art Director of San Francisco, California-based Team Libre Skateboards, Michael Leon's fascinating T-shirt company, Commonwealth stacks, is now available in the UK through Warrior Distribution.

The distributor is also set to carry a broader range of Fourstar clothing. In the past, Fourstar was never pre-sold; however production has been increased and the new range will be more reasonably priced and available by the end of July.

In related brand news, former Zero rider Matt Mumford's now skateboard company Legacy, under the De Wolfe Distribution umbrella, is now available in the UK through NDUK distribution. Check out: www.commonsenseproducts.com

SIDE EFFECTS OF URETHANE

Stay-tart, the trilogy.

The Side Effects Of Urethane group that's responsible for two past successful skateboard-related art and cultural exhibition initiatives in London in the past two years, have been assembling their latest project, Moving Units, to be held in London from August 6-20.

In conjunction with the skateboard-related art, photography, and design event are live music nights, varying by date over the course of the exhibit, and featuring local bands Headshoppe and Uncle John And Whistlecock, as well as two screenings of Werner Herzog's film about Southbank Rolling Through The Decades.

Ten temporary skatable sculptures will be placed at locations throughout London, including Southbank, Stockwell, Camberwell, Kennington, and Merton. These concrete sculptures have been designed from the perspective of skateboarders with a dual purpose that also incorporates public use.

Following the London show, the exhibit will tour to Barcelona (October 15-17, 2004) and Rotterdam (June/July 2005). A retrospective of past art shows will also take place at Chile skateboard shop at Waterloo. Check out: www.movingunits.co.uk

HIGH JINKS AND NDUK JOIN FORCES

Distributor picks up new shops.

The London based streetwear retailer High Jinks has joined forces with the New Deal group, adding seven new retail outlets in prime locations to the company's UK skateboard empire. High Jinks has stores in Covent Garden, Camden Town, Canning Street and Richmond, as well as Roots of Mind—two close shops that are under the High Jinks umbrella, in Canning Street and in Covent Garden.

The Camden and Richmond branches have a "shop in shop" concept where the two co-exist within the same retail space. This arrangement is beneficial to both parties. In a press release announcing the new ownership, original founder and managing director of High Jinks Theo Karpathios and New Deal were "A perfect partner for High Jinks," adding "joining forces with them made sense."

The New Deal group now consists of New Deal shirts, Warrior distribution, Freshach clothing, NBC+, High Jinks, and Roots of Mind.

SATORI ENTERS UK

Tree-hugging urethane.

Northern California's most popular happy imaging wheel company, Satori Wheels is now available through Black City Skates Distribution to skate shops in the UK. Black City Skates released their newly acquired Satori Wheel brand with a premiere of the new Satori Video, Roots And Culture, on May 10 at the Mai Mai Bar in London.

The video is produced by London-based and head of Lake Forest, California-based Satori Technology's video department, Mike Manzoor, and features Nitro Hines, Matt Rodriguez, Karl Watson, Jake Rupp, Matt Pade, and a huge host of other skaters.

There's no doubt this video will be popular among more creative and opened-minded skateboarders. Check out: www.satori.com

Top Left: Matt Irving and Bob Boyle get way out in East London.

Jacob Sawyer and Chris Thomas are Industria's UK reporters. Email your news and comments to:
jacob@industriamag.com, or chris@industriamag.com.

PRESS MOVING UNITS
NIKE DEMO - AUGUST - 2004

Nike SB in Europe

pt. 2

UK Wednesday 25th of August a shopsigning at 13:00 in skate shop Cide in London.

Followed by a demo at South Bank.

Cide: +44(0)2072077055 www.skatecide.com www.movingunits.co.uk

HOLLAND Monday 30st of August a shopsigning at 16:00 in skate shop E-zone in Utrecht.

Wednesday 1st of September a shopsigning at 16:00 in skateshop 100% in Eindhoven, follwed by a demo in the skatepark Area51 (around 18:00)

E-zone: +31(0)302369298 www.e-zone.nl

100% +31(0)402441051

Skatepark Area51: +31(0)402341060 www.area51skatepark.nl

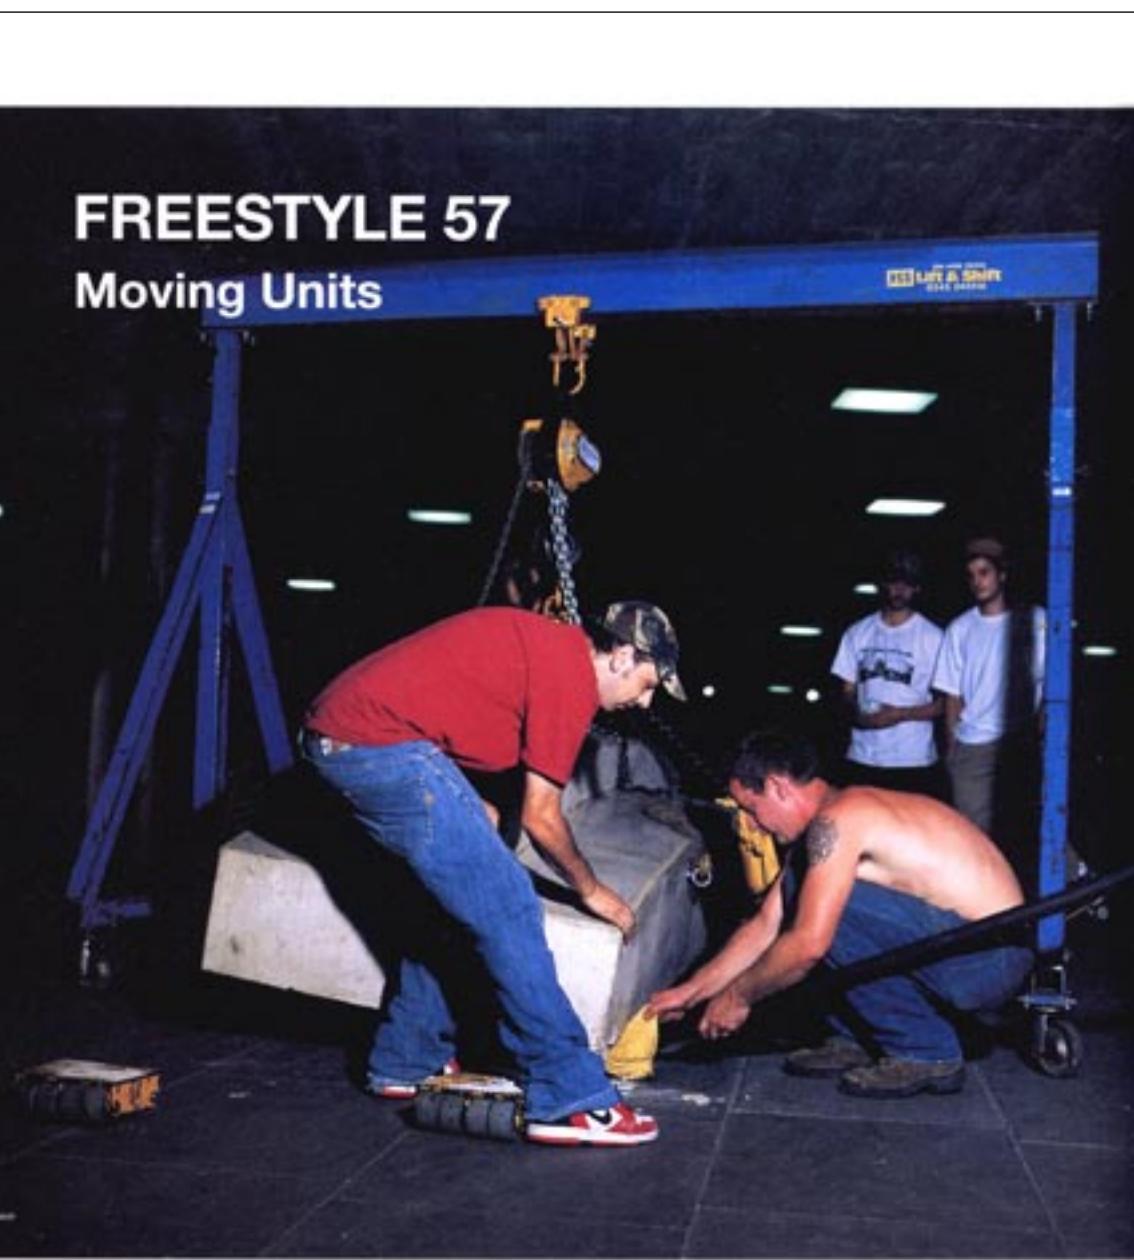

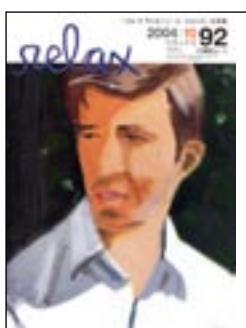

Paul Rodriguez Gino Iannucci Todd Jordan
Wieger Van Wageningen Dan Murphy Chet Childress
Omar Salazar Bjorn Johnston Richard Mulder

nikeskateboarding.com

copyright - the side effects of urethane - "moving units" 2004

p: 11

8月某日、午前3時、ロンドン。

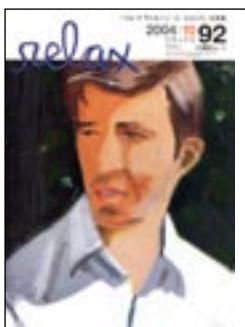

さて、こんな時間に彼らはいったい何をしているかというと、最近ロンドンを席巻しているムーブメント「なんかアカイものをそこらへんに放置。その間に人は必ず上半身ハダカ」というライタズラの真っ盛りなのです。ウソです。こちらは8月7日から22日までロンドンで行われていた、UKスケートカルチャーを祝うイベントMoving Unitsの準備の一幕。アーティストが制作したオブジェをせっせかせっせか設置しているところです。

176

photo: DOM. Thanks to Kiki (London)

PRESS MOVING UNITS
RELAX - OCTOBER - 2004

あーあーあ、それ、作品なのによ。

もんつってな。メイフしちゃっていいんだよ。オブジェはすべてコンクリート製で、半永久的に保存できるものとして、また、美術らしいだけなく使える（スケートできる）作品として制作された。スケーターたちは健脚性を、それが支撑持っている感覚や運動とは違った軽さでどちらかと云はば「あのビルのビルの階段はスケートにピッタリだ」とかね、という興味合いが詰めらぬでいるぞう。あちこちのスケート天国にちょこちょこ現示され、ロンドンのスケート夢地帯に明るくない人びてのアライヤー（地図見難い）にオブジェを残していくと、結果的にロンドンのスケートスポット遍に見るというタイズを付設せり。ちなみに置かれたオブジェはイベント終本題をばさしたとか。

ギャラリーでのアートショーなどアチコチでやりました。

Moving Unitsは、前のページで紹介したようなオブジェの展示、ギャラリーでのアートショー、スケート関連フィルムの上映会、音楽イベントなどからなるUKスケートカルチャーのフェス。スケーターやアーティストたち自身が開幕し、自ら企画を作ったリメディアにプロモーションしたりスポンサー探しで口説いたりして実現したイベントです。自分たちのことを自分たちの手で世の中に伝えるために。以下、中心メンバー（Marcus Oakley, Toby Shuell, Rich Holland）の言葉をムリヤリまとめてみました。「スケートボードが新しいカルチャーを生み出したのは、スケーターが都市や街という領域を、常に、たくさんの時間をかけて探究していたからじゃないかな。スケーターがアートや音楽、写真などを実際に触めるようになる前から、中

っくり伸びたりと、カルチャーへと発展していく何かを積み重ねてきたんだと思うよ。そして今だってもちろん彼らは街にいて、いつも変化を感じとっているわけだから。当然さらに発展し続けていくことになる。まあ、UKは雨ばかりだから、カリヨンルニアとは違って部屋の中にいなきゃいけない日も多いけどね（笑）。アメリカとの一番の違いはそこだと思うよ。UKのほうがシーンが小さいのは、きっと天気が悪いせいだよ（笑）。でもロンドンには才能あるアーティストが山ほどいる。今回は35人に控なきゃいけなくて、ほんとにフライ作業だった。今回のギャラリーのアートショーにはスケート色をあえて出さなかったんだけど、それはアートとスケートボードを今さらわざわざ関係づけて見せる必要はないと思ったからなんだ】

THE SIDE EFFECTS OF URETHANE
由井 由也撮影

moving units

The Side Effects Of Urethane (レーティー=ウイールの遺作)なのと、スケートボードの歴史性、スケートボードを使った新規あるいは斬新な表現のものと共に作成される今月アート回目となるプロジェクト。今回はオフジ・展演、ギャラリー、出版物、ライナーノットの発表をロンドンの中でも開催させたというわけでMoving Units。見る人たるものとして活動をすることでの限りノードを纏めたりのイベントと相成りました。ちなみに、Healthpop(サイタスと名交渉の第1回イラストレーター、ウィル・スウェニー)とかのサイケデリックバンドJ.D.ライヴしたりもして、サイラスやスムーラティースキーつまむけの活動休みメンツ大集合だったそうです。

PRESS MOVING UNITS
RELAX - OCTOBER - 2004

Kingsland Roadにあるギャラリーのアートショーの様子をちぎりと題す。01-02 PDS (Mark Forder) と彼の作品。『コーヒーへいぱい頃みす、いろんな国の子スマイル壁をせがひたよ』、南極のグラフィティ、エジプトのデスマタル、ヨークセーフガラスについてetc】 03-04 生懸者の1人、Toby Shand、「壁が描くキャラクターは、画面に現れたといふ人間の内なる感情を像徴しておんだ。彼たちは電車や建物の中から想像のようが焉（から）」 05-06 ご存知Vito Fossati、「せんぶ休憩で飲むいた。通過カソリカルニア野原のショット・ツリー園芸店園に行つてまたらねど。とてもきれいだ。でもとても真實をとこだわった。カミングスバイアされたよ】 07-08 タイム、ジームス（James Jenkin）【タイトルは『Watercolor Painting』、コンセプトは墨も油絵的にスケースを進めること！ 制作時間は6時間】 10-11 French (Richie Layton)、「とにかくメタルが好きなんだ。メタカラビアメタラー！」ダメダメ、サタニックなブランクメタルを身に纏うハイアゲル系。爆音マーカーペン、ヨビヤー機、ユーティのフレームとその他の小物を撒いて。スカイリッジショットをいつように動作するんだ】 12 オーラリーの内部はおり上田城の「うなみにBTがゆの巣」に。09-10 ドイツ人のStefan Marx、『魔怪パンとドローラインズ』黒背景を細胞特を飾る。実度として、唯一の本筋の順序をしてね。いつも違ったシナリオーションで描いてるよ。今回のオーラリーのアートから見んと云う。13-14 こちらも生懸者の1人、Marcus Oakley、「壁へは絵は絵つかなかったけど壁になつて良ひなと思ふものに興味がある、手前を場所、マジック、想像の場所、70年代とかね。壁へは絵をタグづけタグづけフレーム生懸想したいんだ】 ピーターボイーズ監修】

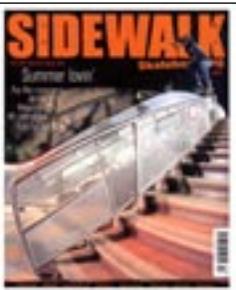

こちらもウレタンの副作用。

ちょっとずつだけ日本でも彼らの作品を見らるる機会が増えてますよ。スケートボードのワイヤーをイメージして画面がデザインされているというG-SHOCK FIVE RINGS(5個のソーラー計算機能)のカマロザのアートワークを、上でも紹介したPDS、Martin Oakley、Stefan Marx、French、Toby Shandの5アーティストが手掛けました。それぞれが個性まさに生み出したオモロキキャラクターたちが上部の鏡に並んでワイワイやってます。

PRESS MOVING UNITS
SIDEWALK - JULY - 2004

CALENDAR

The date has mentioned in the last mag has been corrected due to injury. Tim Brockman and John Wilk will be over in mid-June shooting photo's for Document with Chris Cole and another visit over later in the year to do something with us, more info. The start info re:

Saturday July 3rd - Skateboard Summer Jam, Bude, Cornwall

The Bude session starts at 1pm. @ Crooklets Beach, Crooklets Beach, Bude. Standard classes: Team, Budes crew in Store, @ Marine Drive, Winkworth Bay, Bude. Prizes must also have full bath tubs and full face helmets. After party at The Brook, Crooklets Beach, Bude with bands, DJs, MC's, broadway and Goff Stomps. More info at www.skatejam.co.uk Tel: 01208 268778.

July 10th - 10th Annual Punkwave Tour

Featuring Tony Hawk, Alex Chalmers, Jeremy May, Kenny Anderson, Ed Selig, Tony Morrison, Eric Tamm and UK riders. Schedule as follows: Saturday 3rd - London session @ 22 Soho (Memory Pleasure); 1pm awards; Sunday 4th - Street skating Monday 5th - Stone @ The Bank, Birmingham; 1pm awards Tuesday 6th - Dame @ The Works, Leeds (pm awards Wednesday 7th - Free skate in Sheffield (no

July 18th - WEEZ, Bath and West Showground.

Check back website later on as this magazine for more information. Check www.allemandine.com and the competition page for a chance to win free Skate Jam tickets entitling you to weekend camping and competing 'terminal'. More on that soon. General Ticket Hotline: 0870 1388723 or 0870 1000000 Information Line 0843 138807.

23-25 July - Clapham Common, London, Sparkle Urban Games 2004

New formats for skaters: one-hour course design - with help from Pete Turner, and the winners of last year's course comp (Pete Thompson). Bike signings and sessions with the international A2 team: Eric Koston, Rodriguez TS, Jimmy Fortune, Justin Strickland, Tom Penny, Jamie curran & TJ Lutz and Shelly Werner.

See competition page for your chance to win free Urban Games tickets and goodies.

28th Skulpture, Wimbleball Park, Birthday Big Bock - 1st of July from 10am till 5pm.

Skate from the likes of BSI distributors, Be-City, tour from Enter, board out of the boarding house, Public, tour, Street team, Street team, Venice out of Cornwall, Dual, Iron, Slick, catch, Aggression, Aggression, BMX, and free stuff. For more info contact 0171 Old park rd 21213000 or check out www.sjuk.co.uk.

30th Margravine Jam - Sat July 3rd/Sunday August 1st - Victoria Park, Hackney Rd, Margravine, E15 (E15) (Extreme jams, prints, break ons and it's all free!)

Session Extreme Bore at the Big Bore, Borehamwood - 8-9th August.

Riders confirmed so far include: Vernon Beamer, Jason Dohse, Alan Roche, Phil King, Steve Allen, Mattias Björk, Billie Jenkins, James Horner with Ronan Miller and Jorgen Herwerth. To be confirmed. Go to www.sessionextreme.co.uk or www.curfus.co.uk for more details.

Real Art Not Business

The Real Art Not Business will be touring throughout the summer with various celebrity riders in tow in case of any emergencies a chance to my own family at very short notice under supervised conditions. The next sessions will take place at the following places: Birmingham - Thursday 26th August (Curzon Cinema Square), Brighton - Sunday 29th September (Southgate Gap Club), Leeds - Thursday 3rd September (Brixton Academy). Go to www.realartnotbusiness.co.uk for details.

DRIFT CONCRETE (Carriage series)

The Drift Drift is to be a green eco friendly drift with ergonomic pool tail like Marconi possibly holding the reigns. The carver will run as a series and will take place at the following sessions: 14th August - Southampton 8th September - Wimbleball gardens. Each session will have £1000 prize money and between four tricks, jump and local round robin. Also supporting the series are Engage and SSI distribution! Look out for updates about the series and who will be attending via their website www.sjuk.co.uk.

Moving Units will be the third installation in the new annual 'Site Effects' of Maritime destination-related art events. The exhibition includes artists, graphic and product designers, photographers and film-makers, writers and journalists. Contrary to anything you hear this is a truly righteous endeavour designed to celebrate the rich creativity found with shipbuilding culture and to push for a more enlightened official perspective towards shipbuilding as a whole along with the architectural possibilities that it throws up. Moving Units incorporates four separate but interconnected events taking place in the following dates:

ART EXHIBITION - 10th-21st AUGUST 2004 - Report to be confirmed

Similar to the two previous exhibitions "The Site Effects of Greenwich" and "A Surface to Believe" the artists in "Moving Units" have been selected on the basis of how they have used their connection with shipbuilding to create something that is genuinely original and interesting. Major Surrey Art gallery exhibition. This main space will be showing work from established and up and coming artists such as: Tony Pritchard, Tom Griffiths, Paul Fostier, Tony Ward, Alannah Taylor, Nick Holland, Adam Steele, Jo Ransford, Leslie Tye, Mark Fraser, Sophie Balford, Richard Taylor, Sam Kirby, Julian Worrall, James Jarvis, Ben Salterbury, Nick Taylor, Carl Wallis, Simon True, Bill Swannery, Jason Merrey, Maria De Jesus, Peter Evans, Vaughan Barker, Steve Wilson, Tessa Ross, Helen Zandt, Alan Kington, Jason Woodcock, Simon Pugh and 10 international artists yet to be announced.

SCULPTURE - 10th-21st AUGUST 2004

10 atmospheric sculptures designed by selected established artists, students, sculptors and architects will be placed in significant shipbuilding locations throughout London including in and around the most celebrated parts of Greenwich which has been the unofficial home of UK ship building since the 1600's. These installations will be shown in Greenwich Hospital, Royal Festival Hall, Greater London Authority, National Film Theatre and Design Museum, as well as various other local public areas. The permanent sculptures have been designed from the perspective of shipmakers with time in mind as well as form & fluid motion & which will also incorporate unique public seating areas. These installations will be designed by Tony Pritchard (artist), Tom Griffiths (artist) Tony Ward (Professional Sculptor), Alexander Salmons (sculptor), Nick Holland (graphic designer), Malvern Works (photographer), Stephen Michel (sculptor). See p12 for more details.

FILM - 10th-21st AUGUST 2004 screening at the National Film Theatre, Southbank.

Show in BFI Screen 1 at 11.30am and BFI Screen 2 at 12pm. Blueprint Productions present ISOLATE Through the Decades. Director: Michael Winter. web: www.blueprintproductions.co.uk

WEBSITE - 10th-21st AUGUST 2004 - Location to be announced.

Homepage: www.movingunits.co.uk (links to site and Blueprint - www.blueprintproductions.co.uk

4 SITE EFFECTS OF GREENWICH RETROSPECTIVE - 11TH-21ST AUGUST 2004 CINERAMA Gallery

This show will be a retrospective exploration into the last few events featuring the creation of the uniquely traditional-skate ramp at the station itself as it was formed. It will also capture the work undertaken for the exhibitions including examples of the artwork and behind the scenes footage. See www.movingunits.co.uk

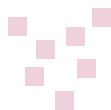

18 (Issue 48)

FOLKLORE^c 94

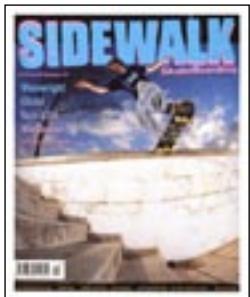

ABOVE: CATCH UP WITH JEMI POSITIONED HIS SUMMER-SEASON ARTIST AT VARIOUS BEACHES, MOUNTAINS, CREEKS & RIVERBEDS FROM THE COAST-PREACH COAST LINEUP: DAVID MORRIS

LEFT: A GLITCHING SKATEBOARD DESIGN BECOME HOTTEST ITEM IN THE DESIGNER'S CLOSET. DESIGNERS: CLOTHIE P. HAGEMAN FROM THE COAST-PREACH COAST LINEUP: DAVID MORRIS

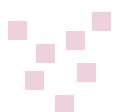

copyright - the side effects of urethane - "moving units" 2004

PRESS MOVING UNITS
SIDEWALK - OCTOBER - 2004

Skateboarder Dan Deacon Slingsby in sidewalk magazine October 2004. The photo of the concrete ledge overlooking the sea is the one who can find his own corner the skate skating lot.

© Urethane Rights

copyright - the side effects of urethane - "moving units" 2004

p: 17

moving units

Skate photography by Marley. Art photos by Marley & Miss.

I have news for those of you who assumed that 'skayarts' (that's 'skate artists') were bumbling, pontificating, effete ponces with nose to offer the real world. And don't be about it, I could hear you scoffing disbelievingly in the back row last time about how it was all a load of ivory tower back slapping...

Well listen up because a particular group of these art-types (I believe the collective noun is a 'cardigan' of skayarts) have managed to pull off the biggest coup for London skateboarding since Lucien Henderickx' bucket bongs in the Festival Hall large back in the mid 80's.

As inconceivable as it sounds, the combined force of Rich 'Badger' Holland, Tally Shand, Marcus Oakley and the venerable skater philosopher Prof Ian Butler have drastically influenced the official Southbank attitude towards skateboarding in a very new direction. After more than three decades of silence and clandestine resentment towards the generations of skaters who have occupied the space below the Russell Rooms at the Southbank, it seems that there has been a rather drastic change of heart and we have the tenacity and vision of the people behind moving units/Side Effects of Urethane to thank for this.

Unless you know the history behind what the Southbank has meant to British skateboarding over the years then the casting and installation of a load of skate-oriented objects and artwork there probably won't seem such a big deal.

To those in the know, it's a staggeringly optimistic official about-face which might just signal a different attitude, at least on some levels, towards the status of skateboarding in the nation's capital. If you don't understand why what's been done is as significant then may I suggest that you watch Vincenzo Weber's incredible film 'Rollin through the decades', as it will fill in the gaps for you.

I for one salute every single person involved in making this happen.

You're a credit to us all.

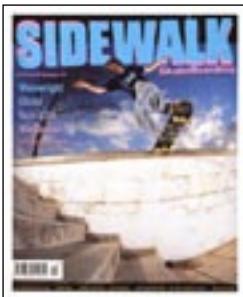

David Marley

copyright - the side effects of urethane - "moving units" 2004

p: 18

PRESS MOVING UNITS
SIDEWALK - OCTOBER - 2004

Now check out the pretty pictures and read the interview below with man-behind-the-scenes Marcus Cunliffe, Big on Artiste...

How does this year's event relate to the two previous Side Effects shows, was moving units a natural progression?

Even though 'moving units' is a progression from the last two events, myself Rich and Tony had the same motivation we have always had for doing it, which is about the creative diversity found within skateboarding and skateboard culture.

I thought it was an amazing idea to take the skate related art out of the gallery setting and into the spirit of the city, with more parts of trying to peak the underlying issues that a collection of 'skate-related' art necessarily creates?

After the experiences of the last two shows we thought it would be a chance to build something out of what that could only be used for a few months and only get used by people who come to the parties. So we decided to produce something made out of concrete that would be much more permanent and add something to the space long after the show.

What we wanted to do was to explore the symbiotic relationship skateboarders have with architects and public spaces. We like to think that skateboarders are reclaiming urban urban spaces for something other than just sports, shopping or other forms of leisure orientated consumption. The skateboarders, towns and cities have become a playground to continuously explore and test oneself against. So we commissioned artists to design sculptural forms that were unique, interesting and highly aesthetic. We thought it would be interesting that the public could use a piece of street furniture for seating despite it being specifically designed for skateboarders to use.

How much time did it take to get the permission to leave the blocks/sculptures at the South Bank? Describe the process that you had to go through to make this happen.

First, Rich (Holland) asked after this last he's away in Glastonbury at the moment so I can't give you the full story. Firstly we had to spend many months raising sponsorship money to finance the whole event. Regarding the sculptures, kindly we could a architect to make plans of the designs. After that the main models were made and then the concrete was poured. It takes over a month for concrete to set, (hence the few problems we have had). Inconveniences of the deadline we had made; once only had a total of three days to complete.

It's funny because in Winslow's film one of the things that's missing is any kind of official acknowledgement from the South Bank about the historical meaning of that space for UK skating and yet they allow you to paint murals and build static structures. What happened to change these minds? The skateboarders who championed these events were Mr Richard Holland and Professor Ian Winslow. Ian was also helping to oversee the Southbank Centre in our project team. But we had organised two events and after these was a exhibition in July at CHDE-MBB gallery curated by the Hayward gallery which fits well organised.

Tony had mentioned that 'there was a new guy in charge there would been instrumental in getting the show for moving units'. Has there been a shift in perspective on regards skateboarding?
Without the support of the Southbank's Chief Executive Michael Lynch there is no way we would have been given permission to place the massive sculptures at the Southbank. Unlike his predecessor Michael was able to see that for Southbank to become a more successful cultural centre they needed to address the community that resided within and around its boundaries.

The art world's suddenly back slappy and self-engrossed on how well do a bunch of badly dressed street urchins like us fit in to this world of high culture? Has there been much mainstream coverage on moving units so far? How have they dealt with it?
Yes, there's been a fair amount of mainstream coverage in magazines and newspapers of the event. Overall it was all very positive, which was nice as a good thing. The whole point of 'the side effects of urethane' is that it is for skateboarders, but also for anybody who is interested. We don't have an agenda to make skateboarders mainstream at all. We're just trying to offer an alternative to other skateboard related events, like the likes of Games for example.

As this event is imminently linked to the South Bank, can any of you shed any light on the current re-development situation? Tony mentioned that there were already talks in progress about estate plans and what these plans, any truth in that?

To be honest not really too sure. Yes there are plans going ahead to re-develop a large area of the Southbank and possibly, in a few years Southbank will be gone but who knows what will happen to the skateboarders? They haven't said what they're going to turn it into, but I'm a rather fond of the 'isolated' architecture itself I just hope they don't turn the area into shops, as it's one of the last few areas left in London where you're not forced to advertising and shops.

What's going to happen to the concrete module that you used to test the blocks with? Will they be sold again? Who owns them?

We own and have the rights to the module, it's only the simple matter of money changing or producing more sculptures. So, if anyone's interested...

As for the work in the gallery goes, what was the message or unifying idea of there was used? You and Tony both said how the idea was to make the idea of being in a gallery seem less removed from everyday life and to encourage people who maybe never go into a gallery normally to go look at some pictures etc. Has that succeeded?

The aim of the exhibition was to make a show that didn't necessarily look as if these people who had created the art were related to skateboarding. Actually skateboarder's craft shape inspired the show, mostly through Burton this summer I actually nothing to do with it and instead I just started thinking about what makes a skateboarder a skateboarder. You'll note that most of the artwork had reference to the people who were making them. I made a lot of the art in the gallery were uncredited at first I think, when visitors found out the exhibition was related to skateboarding, most were pleasantly surprised.

The label 'skate art' gets bandied around these days without much forethought, or without anyone actually being sure if it even really means anything. How do you see moving units as an entity, is it defined by skateboarding or vice versa?

Well the name says it all. The side effects of urethane. As well as skateboarding we are interested in the other creative activities that relate to skateboarding. The act of skateboarding can be seen as gloriously unpredictable in an economic sense, whilst being highly productive in terms of a creative point. Many skateboarders are inspired by the positive energy of the activity of skateboarding and end up creating visual art, music, films, literature and so on.

Skate art really only describes the fact that the artists happen to ride skateboards though mostly, rather than suggesting a particular style or aesthetic?

I guess it depends which way you look at it. Personally I'm an artist who sometimes goes out on a skateboard, not a skateboarder who makes art.

There is no definitive style or aesthetic to skate art but there is a connection, which is the way all skateboarders perceive space in a very special way. You could classify skateboarding as a form of 'holder art', transforming the often neglected architectural free-spaces into something else and giving new life to the bland aspects of towns and cities.

So what's next on the agenda? Now that you've successfully installed skate-friendly sculptures at the UK's oldest site and the possibility for developing that idea must be almost limitless. Do you have any other ideas in mind?

We're currently in a state of planning for this year's exhibition. We're in contact with the British Council in our moving units to cities in Europe next summer. Overall we feel that it was successful, so far, including the other two shows we have showcased 80 pieces in all over the world, and we now have a working relationship with the Southbank which we think is positive progression from the years of Southbank's previous attitude towards the wonderful world of skateboarding.

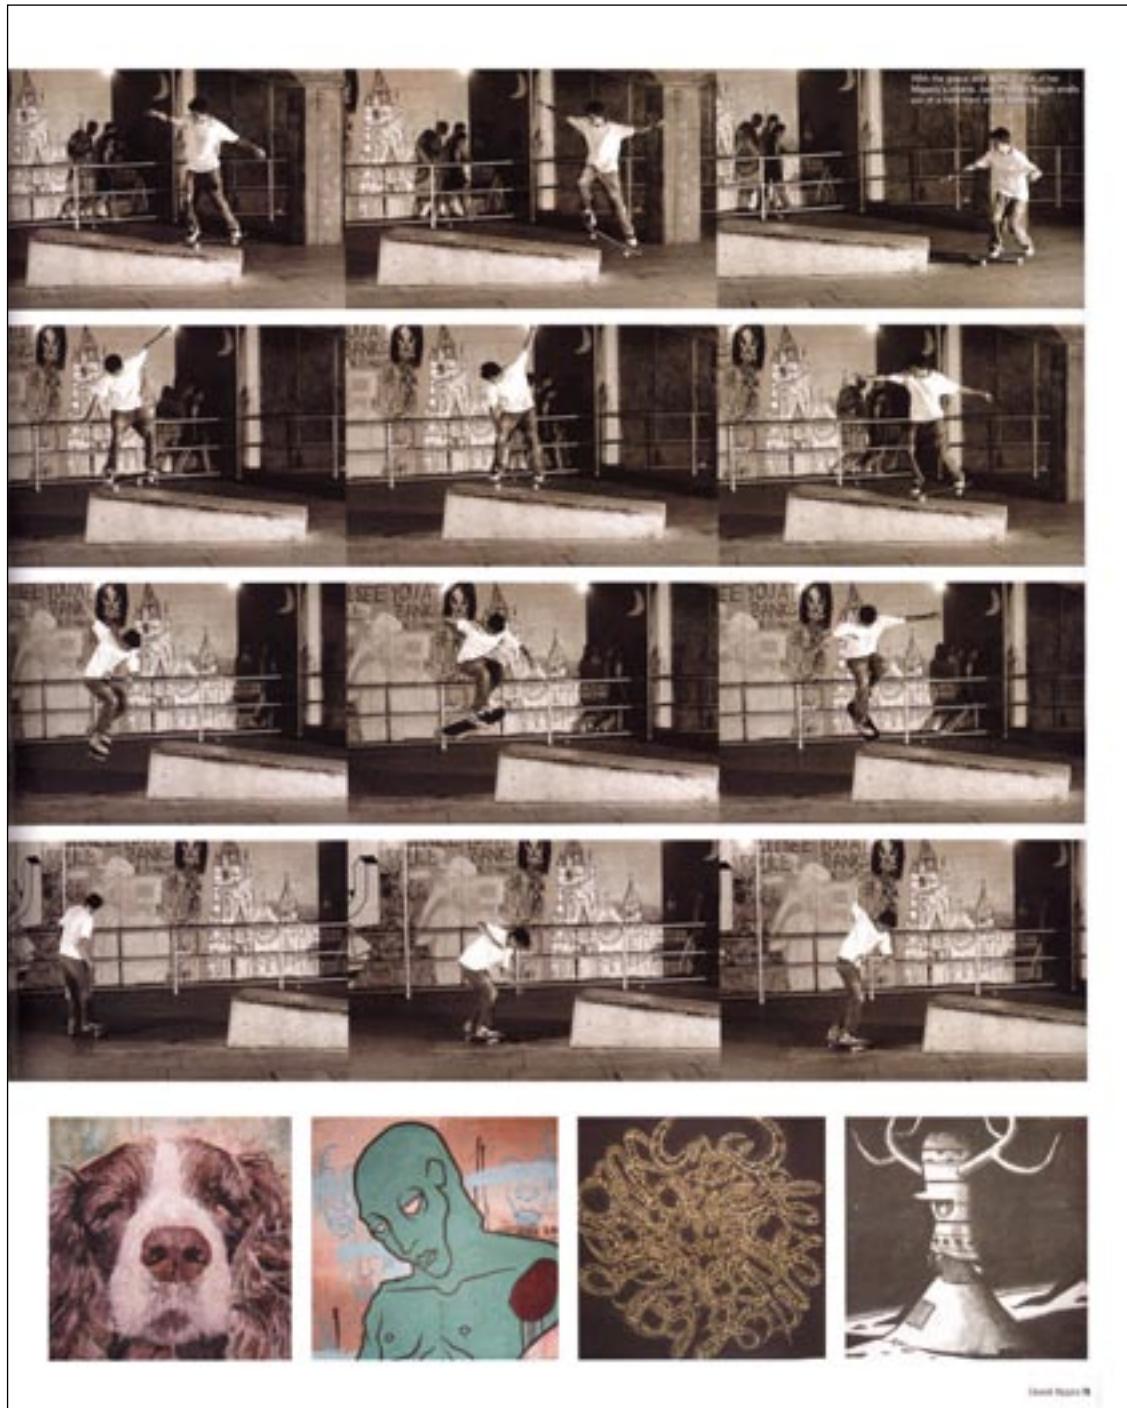

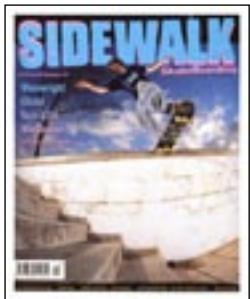

Thanks to everyone who made this year's event possible.
All the sponsors, Pernod, Nitro, Nasty Laces, Beegom, Jeffie, Simon, Ch and Yuta, Nitro, Sam, Pin, Tony, Pens, Stephen, Whistler, the Southbank Centre, all the lovely people at Bullet and all the artists for exhibiting. The bands Headshakes, pride and wristlock, Medicat, Craig Lewis, Limp and sorry if your name is not here.

moving units

- Visual Report

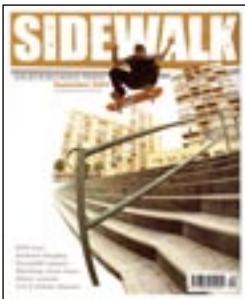

PRESS MOVING UNITS
SIDEWALK - OCTOBER - 2004

LAWRENCE WEINER

PRESS MOVING UNITS
SIDEWALK - SEPTEMBER - 2004

Body Shop.

Get down there and bring yourself some peach tea, the Sun's have been at that shit for years.

Skateboards talking from San Francisco are the designers and manufacturers of the fastest, most durable longboards and speedboards in the world. They now using their expertise in composite production bring you the "1200 TSP" range of regular boards consisting of a 15 ply (5mm) (Flexite Fibreglass and Carbon Fibre) covered in a springy and bouncy cushioning, has a cost for durability setting long lasting stiffness and pop. Skate endeavour to be as environmentally conscious as possible, water based coatings and sustainable sources are used as much as possible in the production process. Interested in electrically powered boards with half board trucks or the bottom? Contact Skate at www.skate.co.uk volume 21.html. "Designers" Barber Raquel's new company will be distributed by Skate LTD and with BMX looking it they should be a little dead. This will be design focused company utilizing the artistic powers of Shepard Fairey, Sublime Projects, Galatas, Chip Rose of Morit of Mexico and the man himself Mr Raquel plus others on deck. This Independent Trucks book should be out by release by the time you read this, body shop give the distributor first shot for a few months before all the literary retail giants get their corporate paws on it. So go to your local skateboard to pick it up.

"Weas and Friends" is the new 2 DVD set from Santa Cruz, which contains Weas of Fire, Cinema on Fire and Speed Freaks off in a safety box set.

The Krooked film should be out when they find the Gans who has apparently gone AWOL.

Reserves, Tyson + Burke Skate Camps, sponsored by Skate Sat and Metal, on September 20 - October 4, 2004

For more information or to register for Burke Skate Camp, visit www.pleasurecamps.com. Also don't forget that reserves Gots is going away on all sessions and try for two to Burke Sat and Skate Camps' choice in a summer place instead! For more info, visit www.urethane.com/urethaneskateboards

Bones skateboard in Baffins has a new website now, so anyone reading to purchase a new site, visit Bones in solid and glow Techno's a new coll. Snow-non-motors Cars as Weapons have a new EP "Dear Strutter" out. Go to www.snownonmotorsrecords.com/cars/weapons.php

For information or Jart skateboards or the new range of Surf World's 25 British project issues call Dutch Masters Distribution at 0208 884 9888

Or to www.boneheadskateboards.net for information on Spanish board on Board.

Right here:

Southbank Art
Southbank finally looks sovereign! get your arse down to Lutonbury, check the surrounding artwork and abuse the units.

Scotland

Well, this month saw yet another meeting with the council in Edinburgh on the subways, the latest is that the drawing application is in for two sites in the same park, as all the figures are crossed up here, the wheels not ...

The Graffan is on its way to the States in September, courtesy of Pease in Edinburgh. At the other end Kast Walking, the team guys from State USSR will be taking after this and taking them round the San Diego area with the likes of HFS and Thrasher... just wait and drop. What a ride.

Things are getting better for the Light Show too, as well as worked in these here pages over enough, Southside's Lee Shows recently took a trip with Edi Gruber, Ben Leydon and Co and put more stuff down in 3 days than he would in a fortnight, these guys are a dream for a photograph. As what? as ... show, it's down, went, thing, went, you get the picture. (no pun intended).

John McRae is continuing his love-hate in sunny Barcelona with Phillips and will be back as it before you know it...

Rainbowgate park in Glasgow is done now, it has probably had the most skater input of all the new cement up here, and it already shows, it's good. Come visit. www.rainbowgate.com/park%20sign%20pic.jpg Japanesepg

Black Mark starting in Southside took up with the council months to have a contract, locals and friends spent the day on the site, and Dave showed something that he holds for the future/sanity!

Thanks to Black Mark Black, the issued and off who made it for the day. Gabe Kennedy is back on full power after his recuperating on sailor with Captain in Asia, he's with Choc, back to work!

The REB BOSS next time is still in Southside, despite rumours of its disappearance in June, see you there.

Edinburgh Wheeler has found his way into I-PICM, oh, is perfect 10; New I-Pic is Edie? Expect nothing but things.

Mike's Blues and Boards in Southside will be hosting a grand opening of the new Southside skateshop as it's conclusion, which is promised in for the 25th September, watch for more on this in the next issue. Thanks to Mike for the update.

Carthorpe.

New from Fife:

The official band of Southside skateshop went down on August the 20, it was a massive run event with a sumptuous fed by the local shop Black Mark Skateboards with prime beef on by KIR Edie, Whisky 12 and under. Sweet (Herring 14-W Gave Caldwel 17 and over) Nutt (Curd). The Council have announced another one new park is to be built very soon in the Kingdom of Sutton, Kirkintilloch, Croy, Lomond, Ladybank, Bonnyrigg, Markinch, Macmillan (Dundee) and the country) and Cumbernauld. As far as we know, most of these are going to be of the oval runs variety with the exception of Cumbernauld which should be concrete. The last meeting of Fife skateshop owners will have taken place by the time this goes out, but this is a joint effort between Fife skaters and Fife Council to air their views or what to do with all the funding that is available. A new rubber park is one option or is extending the larger concrete parks. (Southside, Lomond, Kirkintilloch etc.) If you live in Fife and want to get involved, contact Black Mark Black Work on 01386 238855.

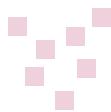

Black Mark Mark

Buff's TM Masser, along with Carl Wilson and other Essex lads Barry Brigg and Paul Griffiths just got back from the Winter session in Poland, where both Barry and Carl placed in the top 10 with Carl coming out in 8th and taking home the best trick prize of 500 Zlote. Result!

The mystery Double Maltese Robin has been on his travels again. After the Maribor Boardriders he went on to the Croatia in Austria and got 10th place and was narrowly beaten in the best trick by Brett Anthony from Dragon, (that boy left from the Sabre school). After heading an almost unbearable range of 5000 miles* in Austria (as, ready? Maltese headed over to Eindhoven Holland for the Bruit Bash where he managed 5th place and won the best trick, which out, the Swedes is as a result.

Go to www.duffz.co.uk for footage from Duff's Generale Garage events, tour stuff and more on the numbers of a UK DuffZ tour for late summer.

Moving Skills the third movement in the City Effects three series began in early August with a gallery opening, and the appearance of specially commissioned skate objects and models by Holy Shovel, Fox, Friends and various others appearing at Southbank. We will have a feature on this in the next issue as suffice to say for now that despite the lack of a crazy alternative modularisation as in previous years, Moving Skills held like a definite awakening day forwards for the collaborative project. Moving the modular structures out into the City itself, rather than locking them away in a gallery space was a stroke of genius and helped great things for the official perception of street skating in the City. Hugo puts on basis for all involved in whatever level.

Encounters

A look back at an education event inspired by the Hayward's Lichtenstein show

Helipop into art

SAMANTHA ELLIS gets stuck into the Hayward's Biff! Bang! Pow! event where the ideals of Pop Art melt into the skateboard scene Events room beneath the Hayward Gallery, skateboarders flip into the Pop Art world, creating graphics (above and bottom), interacting with visitors (bottom) and challenging the seven steps (removed from bottom)

Up in the Hayward Gallery, Roy Lichtenstein fans were marvelling at the Pop artist's primary colours, his clean comic-strip lines. Down in the Undercroft – the area underneath the Hayward Gallery – the skateboarders who regularly colonise it were making similar lines as they sped across the space, challenging its very dimensions as they executed gravity-defying flips and turns. Making the link stronger were films projected on the back wall, made on digicams by teams of skaters – one from the South Bank, one from Stockwell Park – with a bit of help from the Hayward Public Programme's team. This was April's Biff! Bang! Pow!

David Wallace, 15, was one of the film-makers and the only reason he stopped skating long enough to be interviewed was that he had hurt his knee flipping the Undercroft's infamous seven steps. Not that he minded. "It's the biggest set I've ever flipped, so it was great that it was on camera." He has been skating for three years and had come all the way from Sussex to surf the Undercroft's concrete waves – the unprepossessing space is famous among Britain's skaters because of 'the steps, the banks, the smooth surfaces; it's wild'. As we talked, live skaters competed with their animated doubles in one of the films, with Pop Art cartoon captions about 'skating the South Bank' – you can view it now on the touchscreens in the Hayward pavilion. It showcased the skaters' top tricks in classic Lichtenstein-style frozen prose. There was the slick pogo, the teasing helipop, then the phenomenal one-hort 90-degree spin.

Back in the gallery, four skaters were posing for pictures. One was holding his ears out to either side, cap to one side, eyes rolling like a demented Popeye. Another gritted and did a double thumbs up. One spiked his hair up high. A fourth twisted his hands like a hip-hopper. Digital artist Roney Fraser-Monroe whizzed the pictures through his computer and, working with the four managers, created a composite cyber Pop Art portrait, framing them against a swirling psychedelic sunset of their own imagining.

He was one of a number of artists and film-makers participating in Biff! Bang! Pow! Award-winning animator Ohlone were screening their reeling clyscapes, film-maker Winston Whitter was talking through his documentary about skateboarding in the UK, and Rich 'Badger' Holland from Side Effects of Urethane showed some of his work and talked about the future of art and skating. Perhaps some of that future was on show not just in the two films screening below in the Undercroft but in the bold, quirky T-shirts everybody seemed to be wearing. In the run-up to Biff! Bang! Pow!, the London Printworks Trust had hosted workshops for skaters and BMX-ers to design and print their own T-shirts. The influence of workshop leader and graphic artist Oscar Wilson was clear, and the T-shirts had a bit of Lichtenstein in them, too, but they were also refreshing, exciting and thoroughly desirable; a real dose of Biff! Bang! Pow!

FREE Hayward Gallery Public Programmes For further information see www.hayward.org.uk. For more information about Digital Extensions, the Hayward Gallery's programme of activities for Lambeth residents aged 10-25, please email Paul Green on zogmedia@hayward.org.uk or telephone him on 020 7805 0885. You can find out about current projects via the website www.digitalextensions.blogspot.com

Diane Dyer

Upfront

LISTEN UP!

Hear here

Listen Up! Where can you hear about a collaboration between an orchestra and a DJ, access a composer-focused website, have a go at playing gamelan instruments, and find out about period instruments? You need look no further than a series of free events in the RFH Ballroom (23 Sep-11 Oct), which forms part of the nationwide Listen Up! Festival of Orchestras. On 2 October an initiative by the London Philharmonic Orchestra features LPO players and musicians across South East London performing music devised by its members. On the following day, hear, and create, the beautiful sounds of the Javanese gamelan with the South Bank Gamelan Players. Orchestras meet technology with the London Sinfonietta's interactive presentation of its Baroque Online website alongside a performance of Ritual Fragments (9 Oct). And the Philharmonia Orchestra gives a performance inspired by its Sound Ideas project, a programme aimed at creating a composer resource produced by young people (10 Oct). The Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment takes a more historical approach with an open access day (11 Oct) allowing school groups and adults to get an insight into musical instruments from Mozart's era. Something for everyone!

■ FREE Listen Up! 23 Sep-11 Oct, RFH Ballroom. Information: education@rfh.org.uk or www.bbc.co.uk/radio3/listenup

8 | southbank

Skateboarders gather on the South Bank to try out new skateable sculptures (right)

The London Philharmonic Orchestra (left) and other resident ensembles take part in the nationwide Listen Up! festival

SKATEBOARDING

Skate a sculpture

The South Bank Centre has long been the unofficial home of UK skateboarding, but skateboarders haven't always been the most understood users of the site. Attitudes have greatly warmed in recent years, however, and this year the South Bank Centre is welcoming skateboarders with open arms. Watch out for a series of specially constructed concrete sculptures positioned below the Queen Elizabeth Hall. Unveiled in August as part of the Moving Units London-wide skating event, the sculptures will form an ongoing part of skateboarding life on the South Bank.

Information: www.movingunits.co.uk

POETRY AT BOOKS ETC.

If you're heading to the Poetry International festival, don't forget to call in at Books etc. This extensive collection of poetry includes works by many festival poets from Margaret Atwood's Faming Five Selected Poetry 1988-1998 to August Kleinzahler's The Strange Hours, Reverie & Sleep, Das Poesem, The Book of Blunders will be your go-to for the festival, and check out Poet in Residence, Cecilia Vicar's new collection, The Full Moon Rose.

Books Etc. 0117 9411000

LIVING ARCHIVE

Past present

As well as looking to future refurbishment plans, the South Bank Centre is also preserving its heritage. The Royal Festival Hall Archive is on the look-out for any unwanted artefacts to add to its collection if you have programmes, photographs or objects from any period of the Royal Festival Hall's history, get in touch.

And if you receive a card asking for your thoughts at a South Bank Centre event this autumn, don't be alarmed: you'll be contributing to the Living Archive of reviews and impressions. Your contribution will be used in an exhibition after refurbishment.

Also, the South Bank Centre is very keen to hear from people who remember attending Robert Mayer Concerts for Children in the 1950s. If you enjoyed these concerts, we would love to hear from you.

RFH Archive: 020 7921 0710; archive@rfh.org.uk; Living Archive: education@rfh.org.uk; Robert Mayer Concerts for Children: 020 7921 0726; sparkle@rfh.org.uk

FAMILY CONCERT

BBC Children in need

Join the BBC Concert Orchestra, Gaby Roslin and a gathering of stars from the stage, screen and TV in a celebration of 25 years of the BBC Children in Need Appeal. You can buy a family superseater ticket for just £204 per seat.

■ FAMILY BBC Children In Need
11 Oct, Royal Festival Hall. Tickets: www.rfh.org.uk.
0870 382 8000; www.rfh.org.uk
BBC Children in Need: 0845 607 3333

TRANSFORMING THE SOUTH BANK www.rfh.org.uk/transformsbc

The daily grind

London, England

Skateboarders are an unfairly maligned group. Their creative use of our urban landscape has been resisted and criminalised by the owners of public spaces, who blame them for wrecking stair rails and ledges, and terrorising pedestrians who get in their way.

In London, skaters have flocked to the South Bank Centre's ill-conceived concrete corners, passageways and dead ends for the past 30 years, making use of the dead spaces that not even the original architects knew what to do with.

But while they used to be discouraged from skating at the South Bank Centre, Europe's biggest arts complex has recently recognised that skaters offer a unique tourist attraction and contribute to the vitality and life that thrives along the south bank of the Thames.

So the owners of the site have commissioned five new, skateable sculptures to go in some of the unused spaces around their buildings. The skaters now have improved facilities and the centre has a new visual and interactive exhibit.

www.sbc.org.uk

A skater on one of the South Bank Centre's new pieces of public art.
Right: Singapore's bustling Bugis Street.
Bottom right: The stunning public architecture of Curitiba, Brazil.

PHOTOGRAPH BY GUY STANNETT

Riding high

Basle, Switzerland

Most cities are desperate to encourage commuters to use their cars less, and hop on their bicycles. But many cyclists are put off by thoughts of punctures, arriving at meetings hot and sweaty and the almost inevitable day when their precious Ridgeback is swiped from the lamppost it was chained to.

Full marks, then, go to Basle, in Switzerland, which has surpassed itself for making cycling more compatible with the realities of modern life. The city's integrated transport policy has seen the introduction of an underground bike park, the Velostation, where cyclists can leave their bikes for under $9 a day.

As well as providing a covered, secure location for up to 1,300 bicycles, the 24-hour facility has showers, baggage lockers, a sandwich bar and a bike-hire service. The in-house repair centre will also valet and "MOT" your two-wheeler, and if it is in need of extensive repair, offer a free courtesy ride for the day. There's even free electricity to recharge electric-powered bikes.

www.velostation.ch

Neighbour networks

Singapore

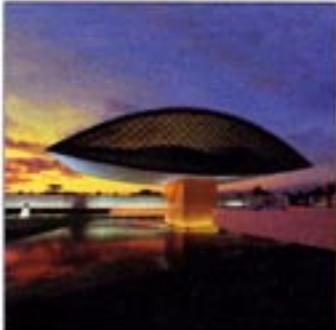

Cities can be lonely places. Even though we live so close to thousands of others, many of us don't get to know our neighbours, and this can have a debilitating effect on communities.

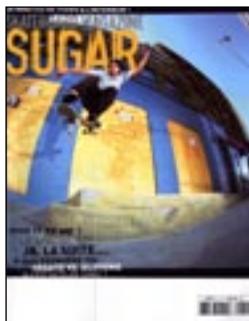

Working in a similar way to the friend-networking website Friendster, the Singapore-based site wholivesnearyou.com connects people who live near each other based on their postal code. Launched in July, the free site has proved to be a successful and fun way of networking and socialising around the city's neighbourhoods, with 4,000 people signing up within two days of its launch.

Each member's homepage features their postal code and a profile, with information on leisure interests, tastes and hobbies, as well as picture links to other members who share interests or postcodes. Users build up an online community, but one that has its routes in a real-life geographical community. Which is when good neighbours become good friends.

www.wholivesnearyou.com

Shira Rendell

TONY COO BOHNE THE SUGAR / PBO AND FRIENDS / PBO, DIRECTOR: ANDREW MCKEEON

MOVING UNITS
(THE SIDE EFFECTS OF URETHANE,)

TEXT ET PHOTOS PAR TONY, PHOTOSGRAPHIES PAR ALICE DUMAINE

Londres, 06/08/2004

À peine descendu de l'Euroliner le premier SMS tombe « sculptures skatable en béton à South Bank ! ». Pour ceux qui auraient pris le train en marche, South Bank est le spot londonien le plus connu, rendez-vous de tous les skateurs locaux qui a vu ses grandes heures il y a quelques années, et que l'on revit parfois dans les médias anglais lorsque des types comme Tom Penny trouvent une ligne jusqu'à l'inédite. Des plans-inclinés, un ledge en bois usé jusqu'à la moelle des marches, un flat correct, le tout couvert, voilà donc South Bank, the unofficial spot of London skateboarding since the 70's. Un spot moyen... Sauf qu'une douzaine d'heures avant mon arrivée, le staff de l'expo « skate-art » annuelle avait eu la bonne idée d'y déposer 4 sculptures parfaites destinées uniquement à la pratique du skateboard, ou, pour rester dans le vrai, à leur rapide destruction à coups de trucks... Pendant que la rumeur se répandait à travers la ville comme une traînée de poudre, j'ai pu participer ainsi à leur dressage, avant l'inauguration...
La raison de ma petite visite à Londres, vous l'aurez compris, c'était donc cette expo, la même dont on vous a déjà parlé les années précédentes et qui met en avant les aptitudes artistiques de skaters principalement originaires du Royaume-Uni mais aussi du continent et même d'Amérique. La première édition s'intitulait « the side effects of urethane », la seconde portait le même titre mais portait le sous-titre « a surface in between » et caddie, « Moving units ». Le vernissage fut houleux car il y a des plus classique en la matière, juste un bon prétexte pour réunir tout un tas de gens issus du skateboard autour de quelques toiles et photos, et boire des bières dans la bonne humeur. Comme vous l'aurez sûrement constaté au cours de votre addiction, l'alcool facilite les rencontres... C'était donc l'excuse de faire la connaissance de gens comme Snowy qui mes renvoi toujours pas de nom de parution qu'il a chez nous ces derniers tempos, de croiser Alain Zevaco avec son nouveau jeu jeu panoramique, d'admirer les toiles au fusain de Pete Fowler, de trinquer avec ce brisé veau Benjamin D., ou de parler de tout et de rien avec quelques acteurs de la scène anglaise... Le lendemain, après que tout le monde se soit remis de sa petite soirée, les plus jeunes se retroussent à South Bank et les anciens à Stockwell, l'autre spot officieux de la scène londonienne des années 70 ! Et puis l'heure est arrivée de remonter dans l'Euroliner et de filer à l'anglaise...
Ah, au fait, Londres, c'est à 265 de Paris, et si vous avez le courage de vous lever 10 taller est à 25 euros. En attendant, tapez www.movingunits.co.uk dans votre browser...

PRESS MOVING UNITS
TIMEOUT - 04-11 AUGUST - 2004

This week
YOUR CRITICAL GUIDE TO THE NEXT EIGHT DAYS. EDITED BY OMER ALI

AROUND TOWN

Skate head

"MOVING UNITS" takes over the South Bank for a series of ten concrete installations from Friday, coinciding with an exhibition of images, left. www.movingunits.co.uk
Around Town begins on page 50

MUSIC

Kurt talk

Lambchop mainman KURT WAGNER tells us about his dogs, his fans and his thoughts on the afterlife in Ask a Silly Question. Music begins on page 109

NIGHTLIFE

Soaking up the sounds

Spend Sunday brunchtime in the rather splendid company of electronic noodler MAX TUNDRA, aboard the Zeitgeist Boat Party departing from Temple Dock. Nightlife begins on page 129

FILM

Will to power

Will Smith and Hollywood co-opt Isaac Asimov's "I, ROBOT" for a gleaming CGI fest – but is it worth seeing? Film begins on page 75

A large graphic of interlocking green and red gears and cogs serves as the background for the central column of reviews.

August 4-11 2004 | TIME OUT LONDON 49

AROUND TOWN
ART BOOKS
COMEDY DANCE FILM
& LESBIAN GAY
MUSIC
NIGHTLIFE
SPORT
THEATRE

copyright - the side effects of urethane - "moving units" 2004

p: 26

AROUND TOWN

AROUND TOWN EVENTS, ATTRACTIONS & KIDS

Moving Units

WE
The Side Effects of Urethane, a collective that promotes the symbiotic relationship between skateboarding and art, has organised an exhibition of ten concrete sculptures outside the Hayward Gallery, the Royal Festival Hall, the NFT, City Hall and the Design Museum. Each provides both a skateboarding surface and a place to sit. We always appreciate an enlightened change of heart. First London Underground realised that we like to listen to music while we play sardines on the tube and now there's official recognition that watching skateboarders attempt foolhardy stunts adds to the pleasure of a riverside stroll. What next? Officially sanctioned breastfeeding in the National Gallery? The exhibition runs Aug 6-21.

... and don't miss

SATURDAY

■ Gunji Mohan Healing Event: An open mind is a prerequisite for this event. Just turn up with a piece of fruit as a symbolic offering, and Master Gunji Mohan will use his spiritual energy to bless and heal you. A feeling of well-being will reportedly follow the blessing. Bhawan Indian Cultural Centre, 4 Castleford Road, W14. 07714 605774. ► West Kensington. Daily 10am-5pm. ▶ Aug 15.

■ Fruitstock: When the company behind Innocent drinks threw a free summer party for its stockists and customers last year 40,000 people showed up—so, confident that it's onto a winner, Innocent is repeating the exercise this weekend. Expect laid-back summertime music on the main stage, a DJ tent where you'll find Hed Kandi, Portishead and 100% Dynamite, activities for kids, a farmers' market, natural food stalls, beer and homemade cakes. Gloucester Green by the Zoo, Regent's Park, NW1. 020 8960 3930. fruitstock.com. Saturday & Sunday 12noon-8pm.

50 TIME OUT LONDON | AUGUST 4-11 2004

so, confident that it's onto a winner, Innocent is repeating the exercise this weekend. Expect laid-back summertime music on the main stage, a DJ tent where you'll find Hed Kandi, Portishead and 100% Dynamite, activities for kids, a farmers' market, natural food stalls, beer and homemade cakes. Gloucester Green by the Zoo, Regent's Park, NW1. 020 8960 3930. fruitstock.com. Saturday & Sunday 12noon-8pm.

Events

Wednesday 4

■ London Skate Hyde Park Corner (one group by Andy House), W2. Info www.london-skate.com. ► Hyde Park-Hyde Park Corner, Westminster, Spain ▶ and Oxf Worldwide city skate (no dry limestone) which follows a different predetermined route each week with marshals looking after the safety of the skaters. The route ranges from 10-15 miles, passing through London landmarks along the way. There is a break of half time for rest. The skate is suitable for all ages and levels of skaters. Novice skaters can have a free one-hour lesson to enable them to participate in the skate the following week. Under-16s must be accompanied by an adult.

Friday 6

■ Friday Night Skate Most Duds of Wellington Arch, Hyde Park Corner, info 07876 811 747 www.oxf.org.uk/london. ► Hyde Park Corner, Friday 8.30pm Weekly (weather permitting) marshallled skating tour accompanied by a portable sound system, covering approximately 12 miles. The first half of the route is medium-paced; then, following a 15-minute break near a tube station the skate continues at high speed. If no route maps see website. The FNS isn't a lesson, participants are legally required to be able to stop competently on skates.

■ Hiroshima Day Ceremony Tottenham Square, WC1, info 020 7389 2322 CND.org.uk. CND-organised event in memory of victims past and present of the atomic bombs dropped on the Japanese cities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki in Aug 1945.

Saturday 7

■ Brunel Engine House Railway Ave, SE15 7RS brunelhouse.co.uk. Sat & Sun 1-4pm, £2-£7 concs.

At weekends there's an opportunity to visit Isambard Kingdom Brunel's first project, with his father Sir Marc. Brunel, now a Scheduled Ancient Monument Site, the building houses steam engines to drive the Thames Tunnel, the first under a river anywhere in the world. The tunnel now carries Rail London Line trains in the oldest section of the oldest underground in the world. Watercolours, engravings, and models explain the logic of engineering, and tell the story of the men who worked in the dark, dodging flames and showered with raw sewage every day.

■ Mackney Empire Tour 291 More Street, EC3 mackneygreen.com. Fri 10am-5pm, Sat 10am-4pm, Sun 11am-4pm.

An afternoon of live music in Trafalgar Square to celebrate the end of the recent Soul In The City scheme. The Christian initiative aimed to involve 15,000 young people to contribute to a variety of community schemes across Greater London.

■ Watch This Space! Haymarket, National Theatre, South Bank, SE1 2AQ waterloobridgearts.com. Sat 10.30am.

An outdoor film screening part of the National Theatre's annual summer festival. This week, cult movie Kornog—Geoffrey Rogg's 1963 directional debut—will be projected onto the 23-metre high Lyttleton flytower. Pick your viewing point from among deckchairs on the NT's terrace, Theatre Square or Waterloo Bridge.

Sunday 8

■ At Ease 29 Commercial St, E1 0DD www.at-ease.org.uk. Sun 1-6pm. Weekly telephone advice and information on conscientious objection for members of the British and US armed forces.

■ Brunel Engine House Railway Ave, SE15 7RS brunelhouse.co.uk.

■ Capital Age Festival Forum, Queen's Gardens, Upper Ground, South Bank, SE1 1UZ capitalagefestival.com. Sun 11am-4pm.

An afternoon of music including a Buddy

AROUND TOWN

Talks	55
Walks	51
London Canal Museum	52
Kids' London	58
We love... Science Museum	58
sleepovers	58
Kids' holiday workshops	59

FLY ON THE WALL

Mark Nutter (✉) Additional Contributions and Images: Zac, Tommo, Olympia

IF THERE WAS ONE WORD TO SUM UP UK SKATING AT THE MOMENT IT WOULD HAVE TO BE SKATEPARK (OR IS THAT TWO WORDS?). EVERYWHERE I LOOK ANOTHER SKATEPARK SEEMS TO BE SPRINGING UP WHETHER IT IS IN AN OLD FACTORY OR NEXT TO YOUR LOCAL COUNCIL BOWLING GREEN. YES SKATING SEEMS TO BE GETTING BIGGER ON A DAILY BASIS. ALL GOOD YOU MIGHT SAY-IF YOU LOVE PARKS YES, BUT STREET SKATING IS BEING SLOWLY ERADICATED BY THOSE PEOPLE IN POWER. SO JUST REMEMBER EVEN THOUGH LOTS OF PARKS MEAN LOTS OF EASY TO SKATE SPOTS AND AN ESCAPE FROM THE RAIN, BIG BROTHER HAS YOU JUST WHERE HE WANTS YOU, HERDED INTO FIELDS OF WOOD AND CONCRETE. SKATE WELL MY FLOCK.

COMPANY STUFF

The Karma team are making their way across the country's Skateparks as we speak. The dates are available from their web site www.karmaskateboards.co.uk. I would have listed them all here but there are that many that doing so would have meant writing a miss sage about them so go check out the site. They also have a load of new boards.

• Howard Cooke now rides for the London Company called Hems.

• Al Cairns now rides for Crime or so I'm told. Danny Brady from Blackpool now rolls around for Satin wheels.

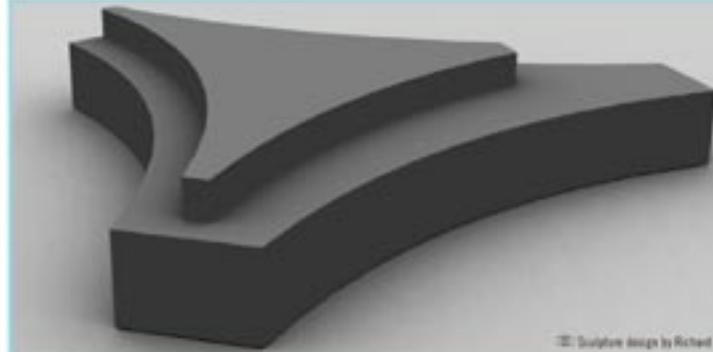

• Blueprint has got all featherly with a range of decks with birds on 'em, maybe they hope it will cause your board to pop super high or something.

• Skateboard pro Alan Ruschuk has hurt his leg and ankle very bad and at this moment in time is lying in a london hospital with metal pins in his leg. Get better soon Alan.

• Death skateboards have put a new pro board out from the Calico series, it has the clockwork orange graphic and is 7.75 wide. Go buy it you 'minie' kids.

• Injuries seem to be popular at the Death team because both Carter and Nicholson have both messed their ankles up.

• Crime skateboards rider Flynn Trotman got 2nd place at the urban games, must have been that Irish luck. I'm not to sure what crime boards skate like but they must be strong as to take Flyns gnarly skating. If you have skated one let me know cuz id like to review one.

(✉) Sculpture design by Richard Holland

(✉) Retrospective image by James Minority

MOVING UNITS

This is the third event by the London collective 'The Side Effects of Urethane' – Moving Units. The exhibition celebrates the cultural achievements of skateboarders and others associated with skateboarding in the UK and internationally. An eclectic range of artists, graphic designers, product designers, photographers, film-makers, writers and journalists have participated both in the organisation of Moving Units and the creation of artworks for the show.

Concrete sculptures have been specially commissioned by Moving Units. Designed by the leading artists and skateboarders to meet the needs of both skaters and other users of public space, the pieces function as highly aesthetic sculptural forms, unique meeting and resting areas – as well as being eminently skateable objects.

www.movingunits.co.uk
Sponsors:
G-Shock, Playstation, Nike SB, Olympia

PARK AND DEMO NEWS

Fulikh skatepark is nearly ready and it's coming along nicely. It should be open the beginning of September. Interact in Bursley is now up and running and is doing well. The bowl is not yet finished but they are working non stop to get it done. The street course however is fully functional and has been built to a very high standard. PA from Rainfoldton in Lancashire has opened a shop in the park and when he is not 360 flying around the park can be found serving in the shop. The park is well worth travelling to and there will be an article on the park next issue. To contact the park call 07829 525248 and the shop number is 01902 642057. Stayng as the North Cheshire's outdoor skate park project is coming along well with an estimated completion date of next spring.

CROSSFIRE 3RD BIRTHDAY TOUR

Check www.caughtintheredzone.com for full details of teams/bands etc:

- SATURDAY 18TH SEPTEMBER The House Skatepark in Sheffield
- SUNDAY 19TH SEPTEMBER The Works Skatepark in Leeds
- SATURDAY 25TH SEPTEMBER Liverpool Skatepark Rainford
- SUNDAY 26TH SEPTEMBER Epic Skatepark Birmingham
- SATURDAY 2ND OCTOBER Revolution Skatepark in Borehamwood
- SUNDAY 3RD OCTOBER The Park Rainhouse Norwich/Great Yarmouth
- SATURDAY 8TH OCTOBER Ray HI Skatepark London (but Party in the evening)

TO FINISH WHAT I STARTED IN THE INTRO I WOULD LIKE TO GET IN CONTACT WITH LIKE MINDED PEOPLE, WHO THINK SOMETHING NEEDS TO BE DONE ABOUT THE GROWING AMOUNTS OF STREET SPOTS THAT ARE BEING POLICED TO STOP THERE USE. THE TRUTH IS OUT THERE. NUTTER@X-ELEMENTS.CO.UK

© Nathan Gallagher - Image taken with Olympus C-8080
© Jason Oakley

THE SIDE EFFECTS OF URETHANE.

moving units

THIS YEAR SAW THE THIRD INSTALLMENT BY 'THE SIDE EFFECTS OF URETHANE' COLLECTIVE - MOVING UNITS.

Unlike any other skate related event, it saw a monumental co-operation between council and skateboarders never seen before in the UK in the creation of a series of concrete skateable sculptures.

Skateboarding might seem to many to be a frivolous and perplexing activity. However skateboarders could be said to be performing a vital role in contemporary urban space. They are amongst the few users of city and townscapes who assert on an everyday basis the 'public' dimension of space in a meaningful way.

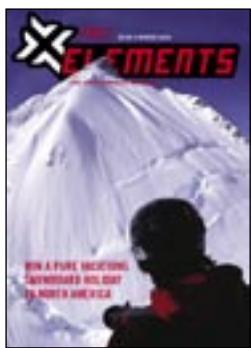

Nowadays truly 'public' space is being ended. 'Open' spaces for spiritual renewal, social betterment, radical gatherings, public assembly, protest and debate are fast disappearing. Skateboarding reclaims urban space for something other than just work, shopping or other forms of leisure-oriented consumption. For skateboarders towns and cities become a 'playground' to continuously explore and test oneself against.

The act of skateboarding is gloriously un-productive in an economic sense, while being highly productive in terms of a creative activity and engagement. Skateboarding defines and renames urban space. Many skateboarders are inspired by the positive energy of the activity of skateboarding and its attendant social and cultural scene, creating visual art, music, films, literature and so on.

The Side Effects of Urethane collective argue that skateboarding could be classified as a form of 'outsider' art, which interprets and transforms often-neglected architectural 'non-spaces' and street furniture in unusual, unique and original ways. Skateboarding gives new life to the mundane aspects of our towns and cities by marking new paths on the surface of the urban canvas.

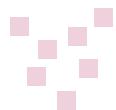

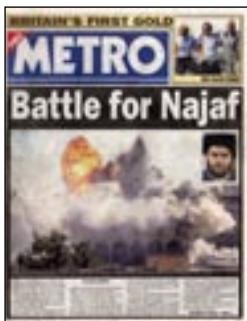

PRESS MOVING UNITS
XELEMENTS - WINTER - 2004

moving units sponsors:

PlayStation.2
 NIKE SB OLYMPUS
The Future. Our Today.

SKATEPARKS A BOARD-FRIENDLY APPROACH COULD END BATTLES BETWEEN SKATERS AND THE SOUTH BANK, SAYS RAHUL VERMA

METROFOCUS

Friday, August 20, 2004 METRO

Ramping and revamping

Proliferous skateboarder Tony King, 25, has been skating the South Bank since his early teens.

"I used to come here every day and skate for hours," he says. "The South Bank was the easiest spot for skaters because there were so much good stuff to skate in such a small area. It had a nice, safe and flat floor, and with more people, like friends and family, you could find every type of person you can imagine, from pensioners to Aykars, pillars to people on the side – it was great for skating."

"So many skaters and performers come to London to share at the South Bank," he adds. "All the top pros have been photographed here. It's a massive part of British skateboarding history."

Urban underbelly

The South Bank may be renowned as one of the country's leading arts and cultural centres, but it is also one of the world's most iconic skateboarding spots.

Since the late 1970s, the Royal Festival Hall's undulating, wavy, smooth of flat concrete and angled banks, has been the capital's leading skating spot, emerging folklore as the other sport became. But the relationship between the South Bank and its skaters has not always been friendly; the centre has installed anti-skate devices during the past 20 years.

King remembers the constant struggle to skateboard there:

"Everyone would ask you to leave, no just if you round the corner," he says. "They put bars at the top of the bank but that didn't stop people. Local lads came down with chainsaws and removed them. Then they started putting clashing surfaces – which did stop it a bit."

Skateable sculptures

This six-for-it battle has been ongoing since the mid-1980s. Now, with a redesign of the South Bank under way, campaigners are anxious that skateboarding has a place in the redevelopment.

The wavy will live: the South Bank down to ground level, destroying the original skateboarding spot. But all is not lost. Evidence of the centre's new willingness to take on skateboarders' concerns are emerging, as shown by the recent announcement – at the Queen Elizabeth Hall undercroft – of five innovative designs of skateable sculptures, designed by The Side Effects Of Urethane, a group promoting skateboard-related art.

Key to the new attitude is the South Bank's chief executive, Michael Lyttick. Unveiling director of the Sydney Opera House, "Philosophy" has a broader vision of cultural centres than did his predecessors, explains Mike McNamee, chairman of the campaign of the South Bank. "He believes cultural centres are more vibrant when they are rooted in the community and that kids and visitors have as much right to the space as anyone else."

He is not alone in these views. Urban planning for public spaces is moving towards creating spaces in front of cafés drinking music coffee and reading papers, public art, society, says professor of University College London's Bartlett School Of Architecture, Lars Borchorst.

"Or encouraging you to move around like you do in an art gallery – gentle body movements in an ordered manner."

A cultural space

"But there are lots of other things people do: jog, skateboard, run, bike, cycle, graffiti, weird art, protest and so on," Borchorst adds. "It's the diversity of what culture that people try to exclude."

"The question for Londoners is, do you want your city to become like a shopping mall? – or a city of... freedom, protest, art?"

There's a strong desire from the campaigners here to have a programme alongside with the Queen's," says McCann. "And they have demanded that they're not just limited to public spaces but the cultural spaces, too."

Perhaps the new co-operative effort will mean skaters are finally accepted as part of the South Bank.

■ Ian Borden's book,

Skateboarding Culture and

The City is out now. Visit

www.sideeffects of urethane.com

Main: Skateboarders gather on the South Bank. Above: A boarder at an Asian extravaganza at the South Bank

WORLD-FAMOUS SKATE SPOTS

■ Built in the 1960s, Philadelphia's Love Park became an accident-prone anti-skate device in the 1980s when they discovered its curved edges and ledges. In 2002, a solar ban was imposed on skating in Love Park. A temporary protection was then briefly imposed until July but the stand-off continues.

■ Melbourne's Southbank has four spots in a small area around the E&O Building, an aquarium, an exhibition centre and an IMAX cinema. It's something of a circuit, with plenty of challenges such as avoiding the water in the aquarium, for both novices and experienced skaters. Some anti-skate devices are in place.

■ Plaza De Maestranza, with its numerous stairs and ledges, is the pick of Barcelona's five famous skating locations. However, the entire Catalonia city is被誉为friendly world-famous skaters mix with tourists, making it a dream destination for fans of the sport. The vibrant city's progressive policies are also reflected in its attitude towards graffiti, which is allowed on certain buildings.

CRAZY OFFERS!

£9.99 PER MONTH^{*} FOR 12 MONTHS

3

SAVE £110

500 MINS ANY TIME ANYWHERE

+ GET a 2nd line for £6.99 PER MONTH!

FREE NOKIA 7600

FREE DIGITAL CAMERA

3 MONTHS FREE INSURANCE

£3.99 PER MONTH^{*} FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

6 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

FREE ROAMING

SAVED

12 MONTHS' 1/2 PRICE!
FOR 12 MONTHS

200 MINS ANY NETWORK

£10 FREE ROAMING

AND ANOTHER THING... other events this weekend

Moving Units

Once upon a time (well, for the past 30 years), skateboarders were the scourge of the South Bank Centre. Thankfully, in a peace deal that could put war-torn parts of the globe to shame, the two sides have shaken hands and decided to work together on this exhibition of five skateable sculptures dotted along the South Bank, with five more in London skateparks. Just as amenable to the posterior as the urethane wheel, expect to see some tricks being attempted over the next two weeks. There will also be screenings of the sk8er film Rollin' Through The Decades at the NFT (Aug 14, 11.30am and midday), music events and exhibitions.

Tonight until Aug 21, South Bank SET, and other venues, various times.
Tel: 020 7207 7055.
www.movingunits.co.uk
Tube: Waterloo/Embankment

PHOTOGRAPH: SINEAD LYNCH/UFF

A haven...skateboarders practise on the South Bank

South Bank embraces skateboard culture

The South Bank Centre has got together with art collective the Side Effects of Urethane to commission five "skatable sculptures" for the Queen Elizabeth Hall's undercroft, a mecca for British skateboarders since the 1970s. The concrete sculptures arrive on Saturday, and could be in place for up to two years.

It's a far cry from the bad old days when, as the SBC's chief executive Michael Lynch says, "the skateboarding community tended to exist as something running over old ladies". Since his arrival at the South Bank in September 2002, Lynch has been working to improve communication between the centre and the skaters, creating a policy of "talking rather than fighting with them".

One person he talked to was Rich Holland, who has been skating at the South Bank since he was 12. His collective, the Side Effects of Urethane, evolved the idea of designing what Holland calls "street-orientated objects. They are dual-functional; they are skatable and sittable on."

There are fears among skateboarders, however, that the SBC's plans could destroy what Holland calls "a haven". He says skateboarders are the only people who have ever laid claim to the undercroft. "It's a leftover space no one knew what to do with and the skateboarders have transformed it. If they weren't there, it would be dead. It wouldn't be any space. It would be a space to go and get mugged." Already, the space has been disrupted by building work. Holland says: "Thirty years of skateboarding history will be eradicated."

Development plans for the rest of the SBC's 27 acres between the London Eye and Waterloo Bridge have not yet been finalised. However, Lynch cites the skateboarding ramp outside Amsterdam's Van Gogh Museum as an example of what they might do. He says: "We are trying to give access to what seems to be almost an ancestral ground for skateboarders." His positive attitude comes from an unexpected empathy with the skaters. "Although I am 53 years old and reasonably shabby," he says, "I did start as a young boy riding a skateboard down a hill in Australia." Samantha Ellis

22 South London Press, Friday, August 13, 2004

Freewheelin'

Skaters are courted

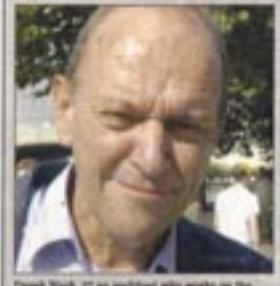

Lorcan Clarke, 15, who has been skating on the South Bank for a year said: "They're good. It makes it a bit more varied. We used to have to bring our ramps down but there are here now so it's a lot better. Since I have been down here we have always been welcome."

Joost Veenegard, 19, is a security guard at the Royal Festival Hall. He said: "I really respect them. I think what they do is amazing, some of the tricks are really good."

"But sometimes they do go into places they shouldn't which is frustrating for us. But I do support them."

Derek Nash, 27, an architect who works on the South Bank thinks the fact that the teenagers have a place to go.

He said: "It's great that they are providing them with somewhere. I think they should do more. It needs refurbishing to make it a bit better for them."

THE South Bank has been a skateboarders' Mecca for decades. They are as much a part of the area as the Royal Festival Hall and the Tate Modern, but they haven't always been welcome, as things have changed, as RACHEL EATON finds out.

A LOVE/HATE relationship has always existed between skateboarders and those who live or work on the South Bank. The area under the Queen Elizabeth Hall at the Royal Festival Hall has been the unofficial home of British skateboarding since the 1970s. But animosity between the skaters and business men of the area, particularly with the Royal Festival Hall, has been intense. In the 1980s, security managers banned the skaters and some people saw them as a dangerous nuisance. About 10 years later, grime was put down to stop them.

Despite the opposition, they kept coming and the area is now as well known for the pastime that it once features in skating computer games sold around the world.

Recently, the new management at The South Bank Centre (SBC) has accepted them. The Royal Festival Hall and Hayward Gallery have been making anti-social behaviour and last week, in an unprecedented gesture, the Festival Hall and Hayward installed five specially commissioned "skateable sculptures" in the area known as the "skatecraze".

Rod Davis, 26, from Battersea has been skating on the South Bank for 12 years.

He said: "It's more different than before now. I used to be very suspicious, they didn't even let you use the nearby toilets if you had a skateboard."

'He was a skater himself in the 60s'

- Mike McCart on the boss of the South Bank, Michael Lynch

"In the 80s everyone perceived us as crazy and now we have been accepted," he said.

Mike McCart, commercial director of the SBC, has been working directly on the project.

He told the South London Press: "There has been a different attitude here since the arrival of Michael Lynch as the chief executive. He has a different way of running things and sees the skaters as part of the South Bank.

"He was a skater himself in the 60s and thinks they have as much right to be there as anyone else."

The SBC has installed the sculptures in collaboration with London collective The Side Effects of Urethane.

They are a group of artists, illustrators, designers and photographers who aim to create a positive perception of the creativity within skateboarding.

Group member Rich Holland designed the sculptures. He is a skater himself but he also runs a design company and skate shop site on nearby Lower Old Bailey.

He said: "The sculptures are all designed around things you could find on the street, if you were very lucky."

MIKE MCCART: he's not a skater, he's the commercial director of the South Bank Centre

Photo: JAMES PEPPER/THIRTYTHREE

FLIPPED OUT: Rob Mathewson takes advantage of one of the sculptures by skating off it — but that's cool, it's what they're for

Photo: JAMES PEPPER/THIRTYTHREE

Mr Lynch said: "The synergy between skateboarding art, dance and music is obvious and these young people are keen to get involved with our artistic programme as well as our public spaces."

"We pleased we're taking steps to make them feel even more welcome."

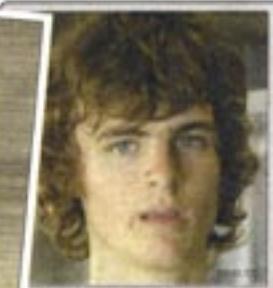

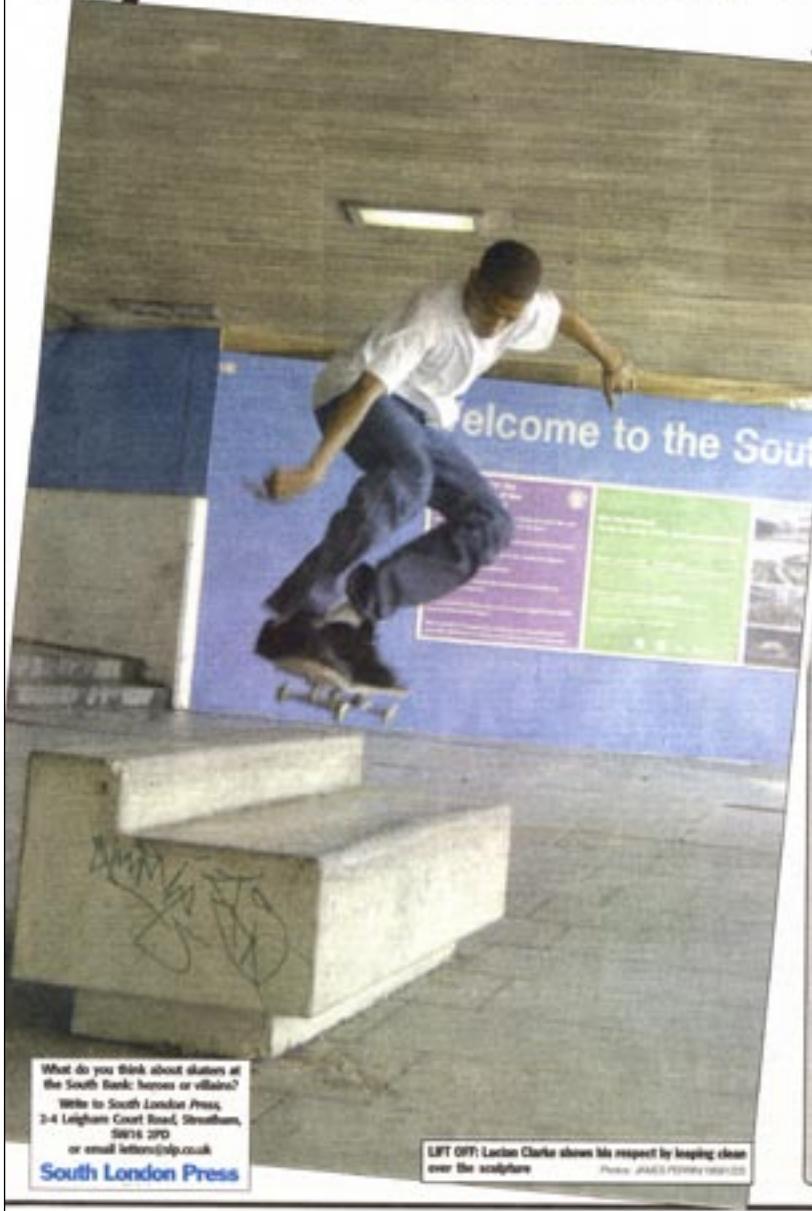

South London Press, Friday, August 13, 2004, £1

www.lsouthlondon.co.uk

by the South Bank

Stephen Morgan, 18, who has been skating at the undercroft for two years, travels all the way from Buntingford. He said: "It's good to have something new down here to try. It gets boring with all the same stuff. We used to get reception down from a local shop but this is a lot better."

Rob Mathewson, 21, has been skating at the undercroft for four years and comes from Kingston. He said: "The new ramps are good, they make it more interesting. It's nice to have a change. We have been converted in the past and now we are welcome."

Gareth Thomas, 26, who manages a book stall by the undercroft says it's good to see the skaters there. He said: "I really like watching them. There's always people going on about how little there is nothing to do and here's something that is perfect."

PRESS MOVING UNITS
ONLINE BBC COLLECTIVE - 08 AUGUST - 2004

Friday
6th August 2004
Text only

BBC Homepage

front page

- features
- reviews
- recommended
- watch & listen
- community
- my space
- search and find
- email updates
- about collective
- help and FAQs
- related links
- BBC music
- 6 music
- BBC films
- BBC news

About the BBC

Contact Us

Help

Like this page?
Send it to a friend!

collective^x

exchanging views on new music, film and culture find out more

#111

Index music film games art books more or search collective:

New visitors: create your membership

Returning BBC members: sign in content by editor

features / feature

Moving units

talk about this

Do you agree that skateboarding is a creative pursuit?
add your comments

related info

useful links
www.movingunits.co.uk

note: The BBC is not responsible for the content of external internet sites.

see also

more features
music features index
film features index
art index
books index
games index
comedy index
more culture index

community

talking stuff that's wrong talk what are your dirty little uncool secrets?

Abduction by Ged Wells & a skateable sculpture by Rich Holland

The most surprising part of this month's events is that the collective has worked together with London's South Bank - notorious for their sensible anti-skate architectural amendments over the past 20 years - to install five interactive abstract Skateable Sculptures, designed by artists and skaters at the Queen Elizabeth Hall undercroft. It's a sign that skateboarding is no longer being seen as the pastime of troubled youth, but is in itself a creative process.

Overview by Jethers Hayne & Skeleton vs Robot by Will Sweeney

"Skateboarding is creative," says Richard Holland. "Most physical sports are about winning, skateboarding is not, it makes you try harder as it needs a lot of dedication and talent. I think more people need to understand that skateboarding is more than just a physical activity, but a form of creativity that grows from the environment it exists in. Just like any form of creativity."

Images by Toby Shone & Benjamin Debord

"Just like art, each person has a unique style and view on tricks. You could take 50 skaters to the same place to skate, and each one would do something different in their own style," Rich explains. The British Council are also helping to tour the show to Barcelona and Rotterdam.

Francesca Gavin 06 August 04

Moving Units - The Side Effects Of Urethane is at various venues around London, 04-22 Aug 04.

send to a friend

talk about this

PRESS MOVING UNITS
ONLINE BBC NEWS - 08 AUGUST - 2004

BBC

Low Graphics version | Change edition

Home TV Radio Talk Where I Live A-Z Index

About BBC News | Feedback | Help

BBC NEWS UK EDITION

WATCH/LISTEN TO BBC NEWS

Last Updated: Saturday, 7 August, 2004, 08:47 GMT 09:47 UK

E-mail this to a friend | Printable version

Skateboarding sculptures welcomed

Five interactive concrete sculptures are to be installed at London's unofficial home of skateboarding on Saturday.

The arrival of "Skateable Sculptures" reflects the growing relationship between skaters and the South Bank Centre (SBC).

Skateboarders have congregated outside Queen Elizabeth Hall since the 1970s.

South Bank Centre chief executive Michael Lynch is keen to welcome them and develop the relationship further.

Mr Lynch, who took up his post in 2002, said: "I'm delighted to be developing relationships with skateboarders who visit the South Bank Centre every day."

"The synergy between skateboarding, art, dance and music is obvious and these young people are keen to get involved with our artistic programme as well as our public spaces."

"Skateable Sculptures" has been brought to the South Bank by artists and skaters, who are collectively known as The Side Effects of Urethane.

The group is also working on a 90ft mural which will be a backdrop for the sculptures.

Skaters will be able to showcase their skills on interactive sculptures.

BBC SPORT

BBC WEATHER

BBC NEWS

BBC ON THIS DAY

E-mail this to a friend | Printable version

BBC LONDON

Travel, features and more from the BBC website for London

SEE ALSO:

Festival Hall revamp is under way | Arts | 27 Jul 04

RELATED INTERNET LINKS:

The South Bank Centre | The Side Effects of Urethane | The BBC is not responsible for the content of external internet sites

TOP LONDON STORIES NOW:

Robber Biggs appeals for release | Husband strangled wife during row | Rescued rowers back on dry land | Five suicide bids a day at prison

TOP UK STORIES NOW:

Five-in-one baby jab plan unveiled | Broadcaster Levin dies at age 75 | Footballer jailed for death crash | Falconio accused 'changed look'

LINKS TO MORE LONDON STORIES

Select

News alerts | E-mail services | Desktop ticker | Mobiles/PDAs | Headlines for your site

© BBC 2004

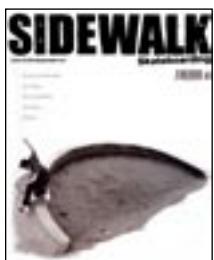

Back to top ^

News Front Page | World | UK | England | Northern Ireland | Scotland | Wales | Politics
Business | Entertainment | Science/Nature | Technology | Health | Education
Have Your Say | Magazine | In Pictures | Week at a Glance | Country Profiles | In Depth | Programmes

BBC Homepage >> | BBC Sport >> | BBC Weather >> | BBC World Service >>

About BBC News | Help | Feedback | News sources | Privacy & Cookies Policy | About the BBC

View from the front seat.

Nike SB team inaugural fleeting visit to the UK.
Story by Owen the driver, Gino interview by Chez

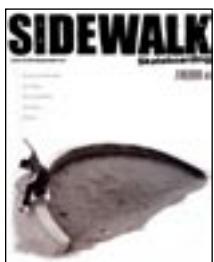

"What's it like touring with a pro' team?"

The first time I got asked that question, the answer was just a simple, "yeah it's cool". Then, during a slightly alcohol fuelled chat with a hairy scouser in a London night club, the decision to put pen to paper was made. (Thanks Mackey!) Until quite recently I hadn't skated for 20 years, then I got asked to drive a bunch of guys from the Real Team round the country... After 7 days on the road with that lot, I realised that I had never really got skating out of my blood. The most fun I'd had at work for a long time, and the kick up the arse I needed to get back on a board. Well let me tell you, at 42 years old, skating still rocks! So you can shove ya pipe and slippers, and all the trappings of middle age, I'm going skating! Anyway, enough about my middle crisis, and onto the reason I'm tapping away at this keyboard, the recent visit to our accepted site by the Nike team. Well I knew this tour was going to be good when I found out which hotel we'd been booked into for the first couple of nights in London. Let's just say that being on the books of a big corporation like Nike has some obvious financial advantages. (Seth Palmer looked more than a bit gob-smacked at the first sight of the room, and a small mortgage would have been needed for any serious assault on the minibar, (£450 for a tube of Pg smartee).

© David Morris

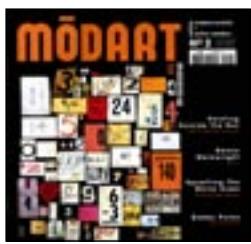

PRESS MOVING UNITS
SIDEWALK - NOVEMBER - 2004

Paul Rodriguez turned up at Southbank, plugged his brain into his I-Pod and proceeded to shut down the Southbank soul. Nolle horrore amongst other things. See Horrore.

PRESS MOVING UNITS
MODART - JANUARY - 2005

scale 1:10

100
600
1000 mm

Marcus Oakley

Artist / Curator

Originally from Ada, a village in the county of Norfolk. Started skateboarding in 1987, came to London in 1993, studied fine art and graphic design. I spend my days working as a illustrator - skateboard related clients have included Heroin, Cliché, Slam City Skates, Howlers, Addict, Siles and Sidewalk magazine.

Richard Holland

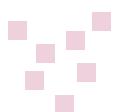

Art director / Producer

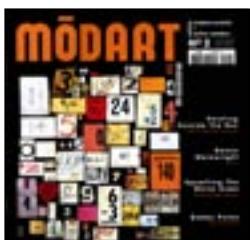

Born in Tynemouth, then moved to a village... Been skateboarding since I was 12, now Art Director of a London-based design company - United Bullet. Co-owner of CODE skateboard shop in Warrington. Curator of 688 gallery.

Toby Shuall

Artist / Production Coordinator

Straight out of Pinner. Artist and professional skateboarder for Landscape and I-Push. Owner of a London based clothing company Suburban Bits and creator of The Side Effects of Urethane.

Moving Units

History

In a freezing cold weekend in November 2004, we hosted our first exhibition/wear - The Side Effects of Urethane. In the first floor of an old jam factory, soon to be demolished, 30 artists each was invited organically. The show included painting, photographs, sculpture and film by artists based mainly in the UK, with a guest handful from Europe, US, and Japan.

On the second floor was the skatepark, consisting of complex modular hips and ramps with various transitions. The skatepark was painted white to show the lines and patterns created by the skateboarders, and as time passed the skatepark was turned into a huge three-dimensional drawing of wheel marks over the surface of the park.

For two weeks the following May, we presented our second event A Surface In Between. We wanted a stronger, more refined showcase of international artists on the top floor of a disused Victorian school. Artists were selected to reflect the creative diversity within the skateboard community, a broad cultural area. Some of the artists included were: Thomas Campbell, Robin Ireland, Pepe Freire, Phil Frost, James Jarvis and Toly Petersen.

For this ramp installation, we worked with an architect to create a totally unique skateboard instance. The obstacle consisted of a room with transitioned walls, and a central structure made out of all boards to resemble an octagon shape. The idea was to create a skateboard installation that could be approached from any angle.

Moving Units

For "Moving Units" we wanted to divide the event into five individual parts, which were: 1. Art show, 2. Retrospective, 3. Film screening of Weston Whittaker's UK skateboarding documentary "Rollin' Through the Decades", 4. Music Night, 5. Installation of skateable sculptures at the South Bank.

For the first time, the art show was held in a conventional gallery space, which included a shop selling artist's t-shirts, badges, posters, books, and prints.

To continue to develop the theme of previous shows, we decided to place skateable sculptures at the South Bank. To explore the symbiotic relationship between skateboarding and architecture, we looked at the way skateboarders utilize the urban realm in alternative ways, transmuting the mundane functions for which it was conceived.

The sculptures, commissioned by "The Side Effects of Urethane", were designed by the artists and skateboarders to meet the needs of both skaters and other users of the public space - working both as functional pieces, and highly aesthetic sculptural forms.

Our sites are simply to positively present the rapidly growing and changing creative diversity found within skateboarding, and skateboard culture.

Next summer we will be touring Moving Units around Europe, with support from the British Council, with a book due out sometime next year.

Favourite skater

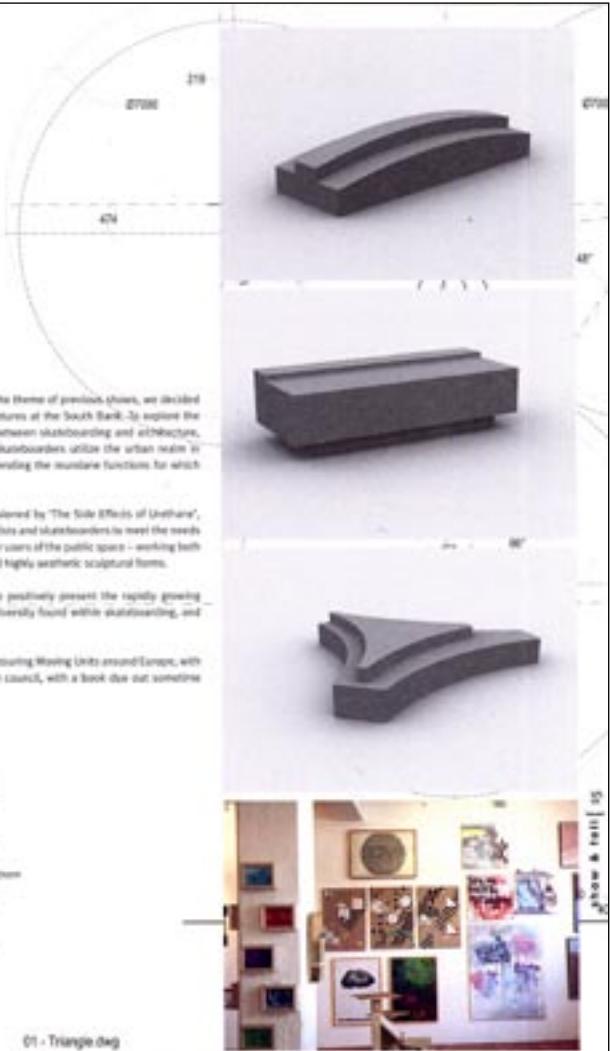

Richie Marc Johnson
Toby Kenny Reed
Marcus Mark Gonzales

Favourite artist

Richie Chris Cunningham
Tobias Paul Hobble
Marcus Jackham Nentwich

Favourite artist/skater

Richie French
Toby Bobby Pulido
Marcus Chris Johnson

01 - Triangle dag
14.08.04
Scale 1:50

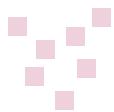

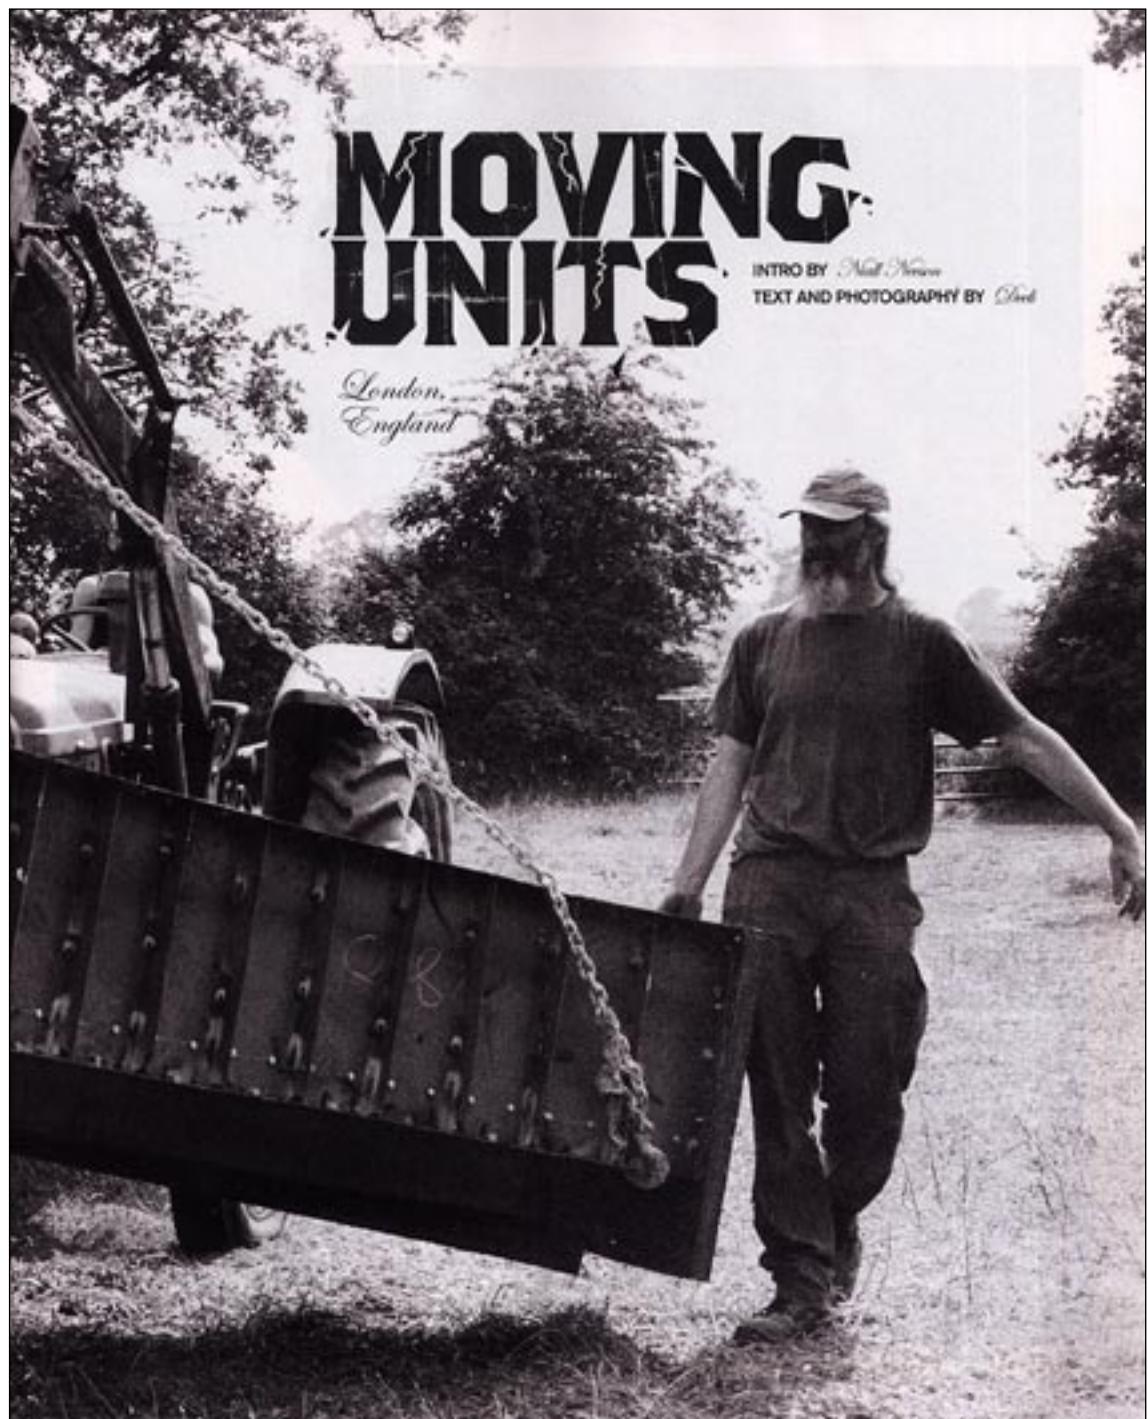

PRESS MOVING UNITS
KINGPIN - FEBRUARY/MARCH - 2005

copyright - the side effects of urethane - "moving units" 2004

p: 43

PRESS MOVING UNITS
KINGPIN - FEBRUARY/MARCH - 2005

copyright - the side effects of urethane - "moving units" 2004

p: 44

Opening: City and Mon moving the units

Above: White man with-offs sitting in steel mould! Say what?

Top: If this was in Hove, Badger would be clipped in a second. You're supposed to hide behind that block, not run around it in that wide open rice field.

FOR THE PAST COUPLE OF YEARS, LONDON HAS HOSTED AN EVER-EVOLVING SKATEBOARD AND (STEADY YOUR NERVES) ART SHOW KNOWN LOOSELY AS THE SIDE EFFECTS OF URETHANE, IN WHICH A WAREHOUSE-TYPE SPACE WILL BE FOUND, TAKEN OVER AND FOR SOME SHORT SPACE OF TIME (SOMETIMES ONLY A WEEKEND; CERTAINLY NOT FOR LONG) THERE IS A SPORADIC AND SLIGHTLY LAWLESS CELEBRATION OF THIS THING WE HOLD SO DEAR.

This year's instalment differed because rather than create an ephemeral structure as previously, where it would be torn down as soon as the game was up, the collective decided to build something a little more concrete, if you will.

You may remember us pointing in the London article (Issue #3) that the capital draws in skaters from many outlying areas, and the weight of numbers has made many places in London an almost instant built-to-skate; especially since fear of an IRA bomb attack ten years ago meant that whole swathes of the city are under the ever-watchful eye of CCTV.

The Side Effects gang, include champion park builder Pin Dabouze, Toby Shuard and Oliver Watson, Marcus Oakley and Cole skateshop owners Greg Finch and Badger, aka Rich Holland. Cole has injected a great deal of life into London's skate scene, which once paralleled New York for lack of actual skating and shops whose priority seemed to be selling overpriced T-shirts to Japanese tourists and not promoting skating itself. Cole shook the scene by the necks, and in conjunction with this year's event the boys set about building permanent skateable structures which they would deploy in Central London in the dead of night with the use of a teleporter and a gang of nocturnal hoodlums to help put them in place before anyone could come along asking questions.

Each concrete obstacle was designed by a different artist, but in order to get them off the page and into reality, the crew had to find someone who could make them. This turned out to be a complete in the middle of nowhere, and Kingpin were invited along to see the genesis of a DIY skatespot unfold. Orell takes up the story:

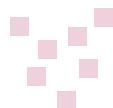

MOVING UNITS / orell

PRESS MOVING UNITS
KINGPIN - FEBRUARY/MARCH - 2005

Above left: Don't you just love the sight of virgin concrete - no marks, no wax, no bits chipping off, just sitting there waiting to show you good form.
Above right: Stoker, the welder extraordinaire
Below: There won't be any gold at the end of this rainbow, just good 'ol concrete

PRESS MOVING UNITS
KINGPIN - FEBRUARY/MARCH - 2005

This project was very different from fixing a crack in front of a nail, or adding a little make-shift Trinity to the wall down the road to help out with wall rides. It's also a pretty long gap to bridge from a nice idea to the finished thing. There are large sums of money to raise, permits to obtain, more than a few bureaucrats to convince, and once you've contacted all the necessary people you find yourself juggling between dozens of characters with completely opposite sets of priorities and ways of working.

To begin with, none of the Side Effects people are really concrete pourers. Sure, Rich Holland is at home with power tools, but you don't pour two-ton concrete sculptures with an electrical hacksaw. For this type job you want to have an expert or two who know their way around steel and cement. And this is where Hugo and Oly came in.

According to Oly, when Hugo first contacted him, the idea was that the two of them, on their own, would make the moulds and pour ten of these things and deliver them to the specified sites in London. All in the space of three weeks, and with no room for error.

>>>Right: The walls of South Bank remained pretty much free of tags until the Moving Units moulds were pointed there. Apparently, some people took them as a cue for an all-out bomb attack and literally days after the paintings were finished, they got run over and covered in shit.
Come on, there's plenty of concrete in London, you don't need to fuck up other people's art in order to endorse yours. Jeffs working on his lot.

MOVING UNITS / photo: Oly

Above: Sliding gear at South Bank, 3 ton.

>>>Left: The structural casts come taking a break from it all.

>>>Right: Sam Goffin getting a taste of his own design, 50:50 at the end of the rainbow.

Moving Units

Oly looked at Hugo, laughed and told him to forget it. He'd need at least two welders and enough open space for the things to set; 10 sculptures in 3 weeks was out of the question – there would be a maximum of 7 and no guarantees given.

The next thing he knew is Hugo's got it all figured out and Oly's getting dropped off in the middle of nowhere out in the fields of East Anglia about 250 km away from his workshop in Bristol to work alongside Hugo's contacts Max and Stoker. They were going to make 5 reusable steel moulds, weighing close to a ton each, in the back of a trailer camp.

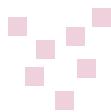

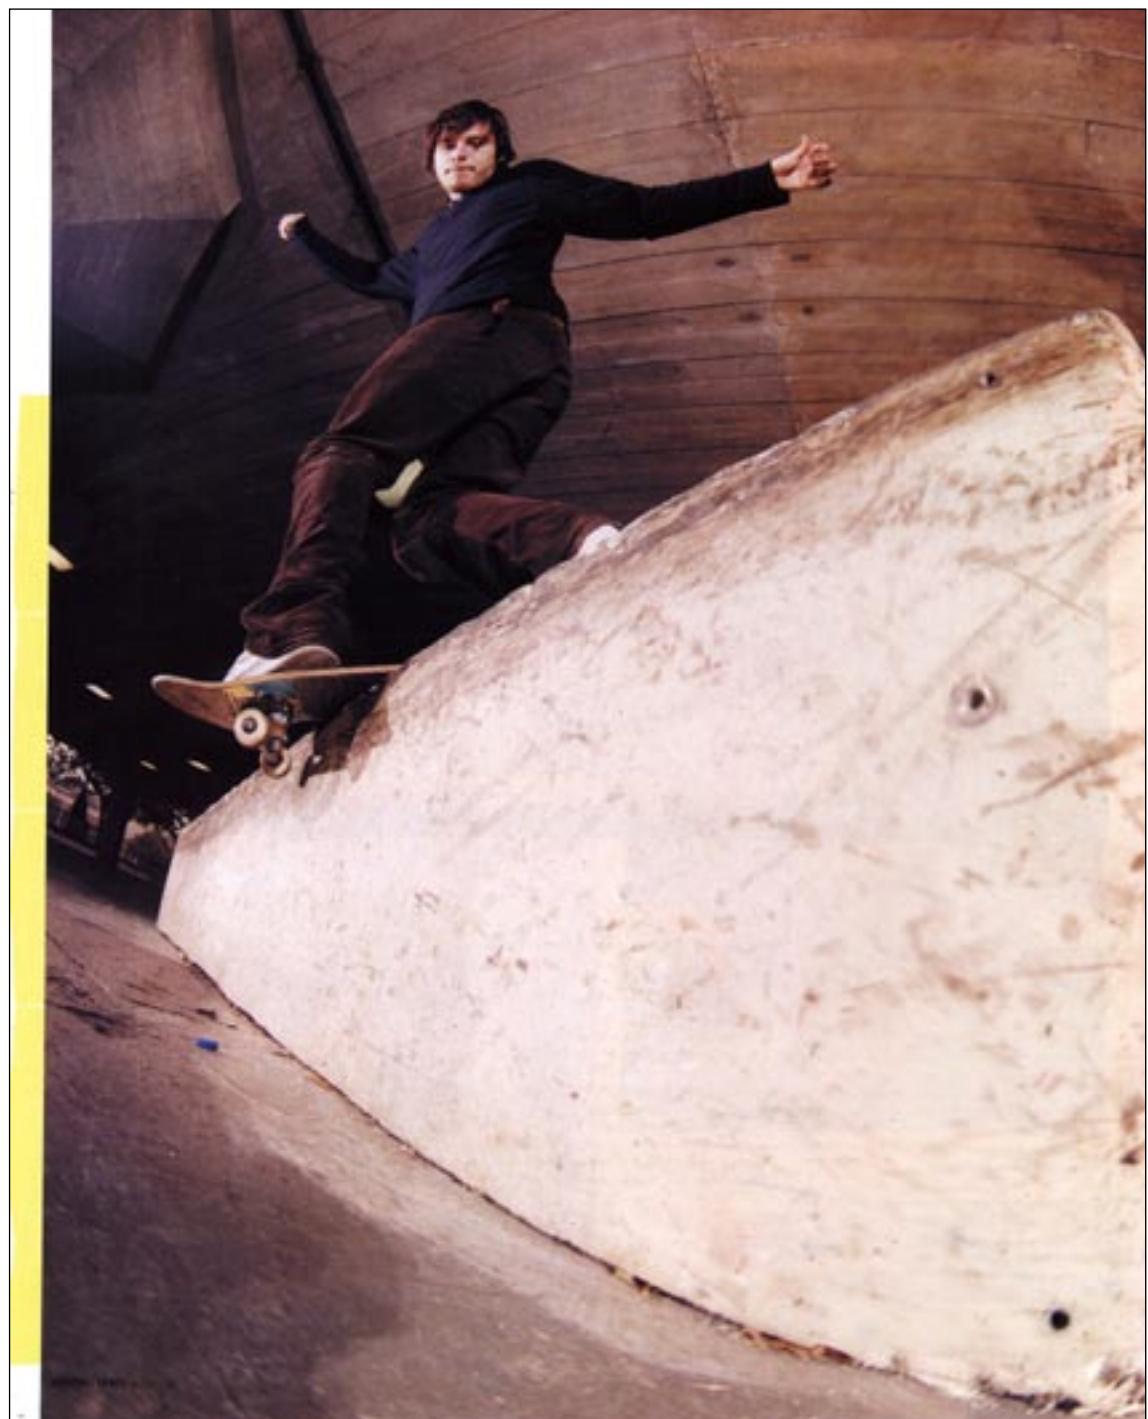

Oly is a maker of things. 'Things need made, I make them', he says. His background is in sculpture, but in the past few years his activities have shifted more and more towards making moulds for artists who like to work with concrete. There aren't many of these guys around and Oly is on top of his game. Spending 3 weeks in the fields was a first one for him, though.

Max and Stoker are the sort of free range people who take their lives as they come and their belongings and skills wherever they feel like going. They've lived in this particular settlement for a few years now, however, and have a fully functional metal workshop set up. You get a tent enclosing the site with a custom made steel gate and as you move in, there are bits and pieces of welded craftsmanship here and there to give you the idea. Prior to this particular job the two knew a lot about metal, but nothing much about concrete. Stoker's limited experience on the stuff came from the road constructions he had worked on for a brief time. He mentioned pretty much every motorway I could remember hearing about, but then they all sound the same to me.

At some point Stoker probably started feeling uncomfortable with the whole idea of motorways and he became a fierce protester against the roads that he had built. And that was the end of his concrete career – until the Moving Units came along. Max has been a regular at every festival in the country, minor or major, from Stonehenge to Glastonbury, since before I was born. He's been going non-stop since the 70's and still spends most of his summer weekends trucking around his purpose built sound system. Come lunchtime, when the blowtorch dies out, you could easily drift into a cove of festival history with these guys. Living the life they do, Max and Stoker have a certain amount of ideals and morals they stick to. For an outsider like myself or Oly it's easy to feel a bit uneasy at the camp at first, when you're not quite sure to what extent they'd expect other people to share their views. In my short experience, freedom of speech seemed to prevail between the trailers, though.

PRESS MOVING UNITS
KINGPIN - FEBRUARY/MARCH - 2005

copyright - the side effects of urethane - "moving units" 2004

p: 49

...right: Charlie Young block tipping up the wedge.

Above: East-london space taken over by orflags

...right: Sold orflags on mobile phones

These were not the nickel-framed glasses and green parka wearing brats that release minks from cages to run the local ecosystem. It's more about doing your bit your way and letting others do theirs the way they see it.

The starting point for these skateables was the fact that there are practically no skateable blocks in the whole of London. Marvus made a valid point in saying that this time the sculptures were going to be in the most popular skate spot in London as opposed to a gallery, where they wouldn't bother anyone even if they turned out unskateable.

The only problem with the blocks has been the chipping of their corners due to the short time they had to set before being shredded on. In Oly's opinion concrete would need a minimum of 3 weeks to dry, whereas some of these only had three days. But that is a minor quibble, and the moulds can be reused should they decide to make more.

Time will tell whether more Units will start popping up around London, but either way the four sitting at South Bank at the moment are a concrete example of how an idea took shape and made its way from being tossed around the campfire to actually being skated.

Get off your arse and make things happen, because no-one will do it for you.

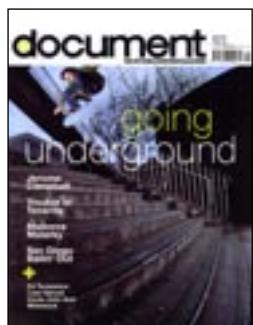

MOVING UNITS

MANY THANKS TO

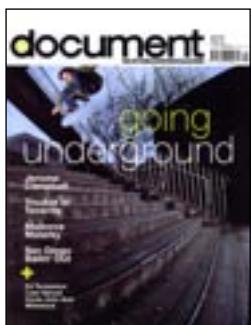

OLYMPUS

PRESS MOVING UNITS
DOCUMENT - APRIL - 2005

PRESS MOVING UNITS
DOCUMENT - APRIL - 2005

Skate of Mind

Skateboard Shop London

Covent Garden
Unit 28 Thomas Neal's Centre
Earlham Street
Covent Garden
WC2H 8LD
0207 838 9080

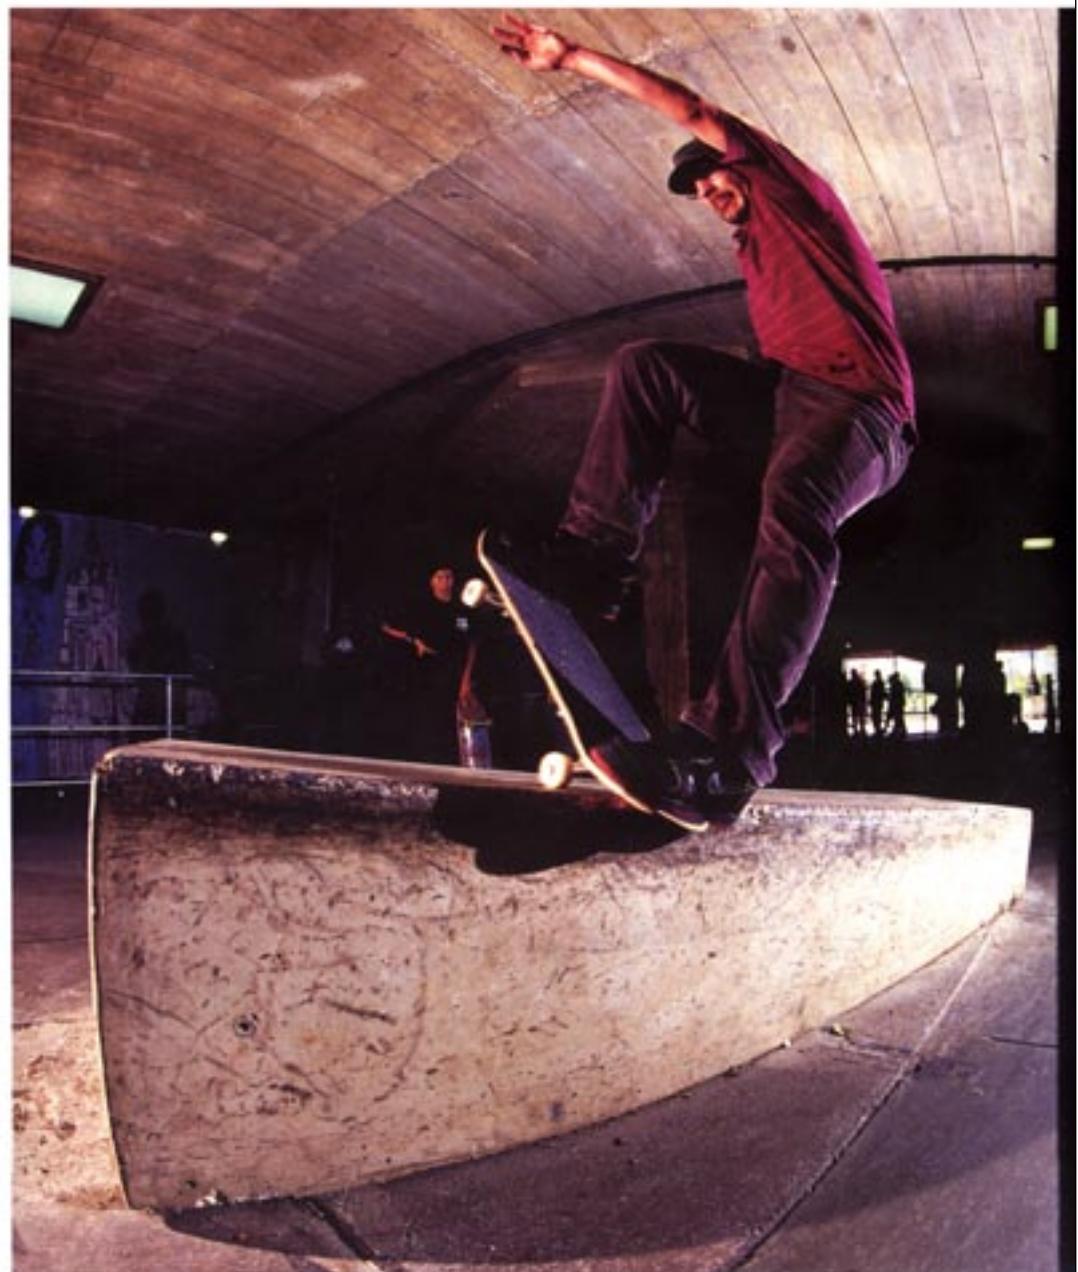

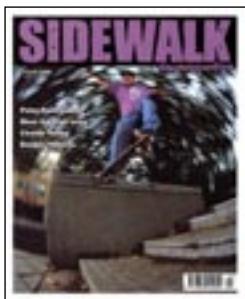

Camden
Unit 3 Camden Walk
Jennetown Road
Camden High Street
NW1 7BX
0207 434 0295

Camden

copyright - the side effects of urethane - "moving units" 2004

p: 52

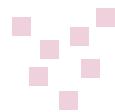

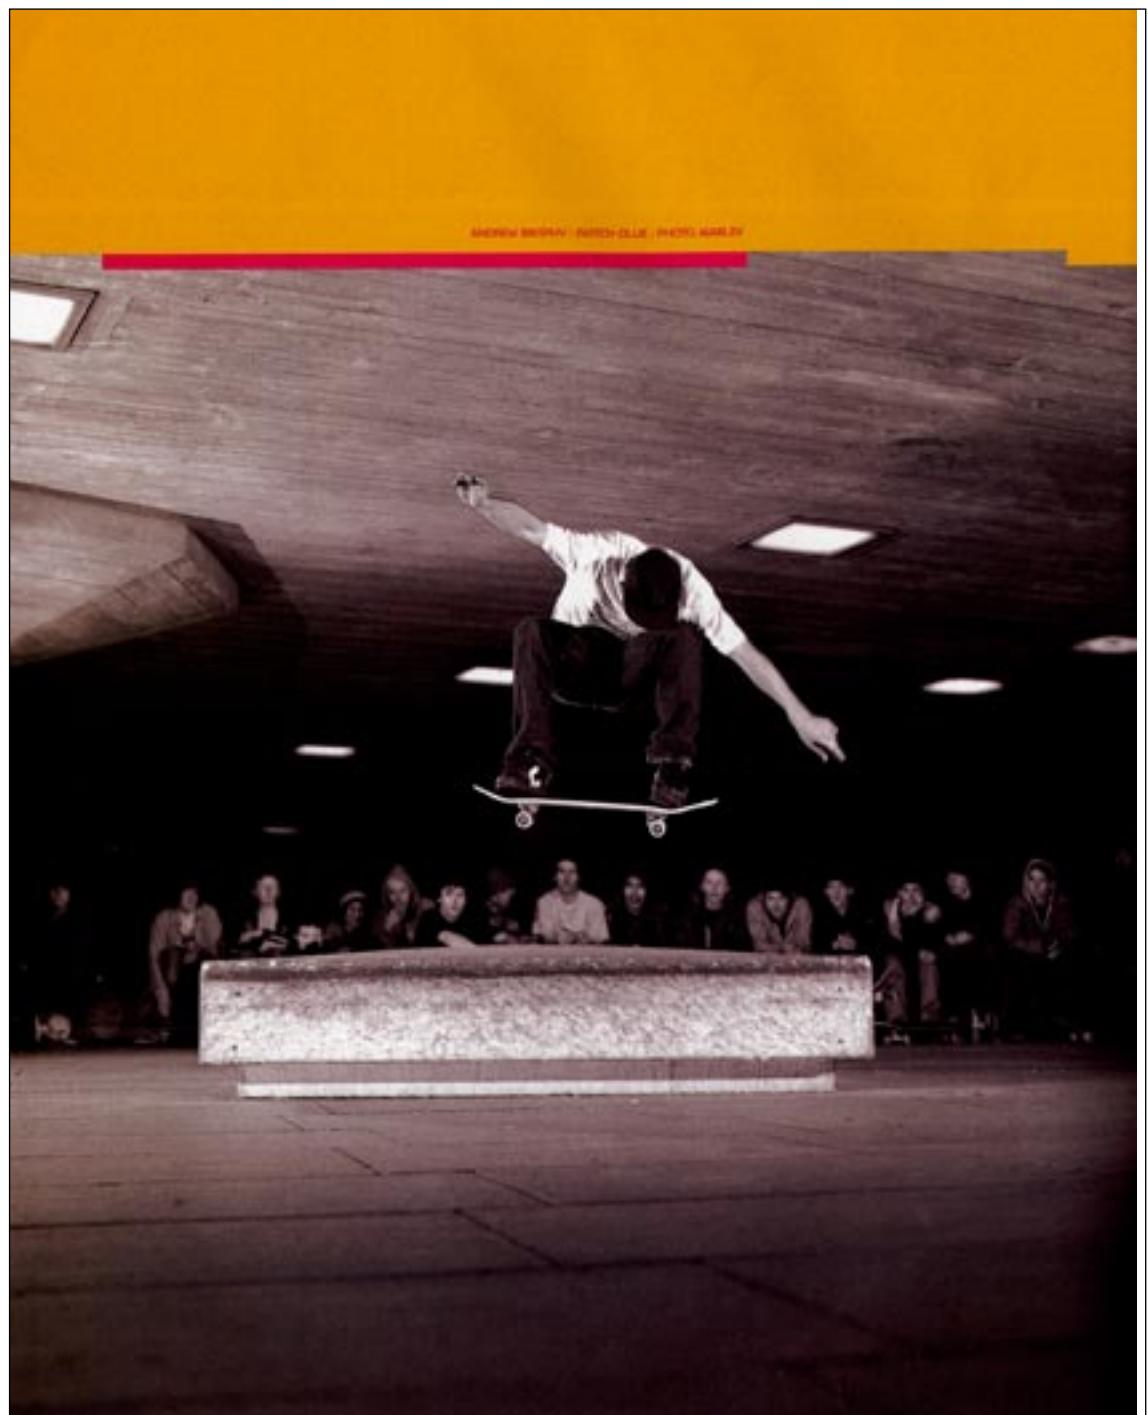

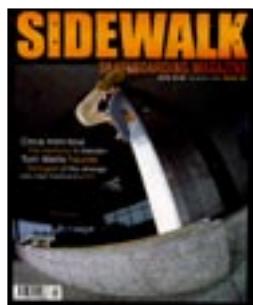

PRESS MOVING UNITS
SIDEWALK - FEBRUARY - 2005

D42
www.sidewalkmag.com

PRESS MOVING UNITS
SIDEWALK - SEPTEMBER - 2005

copyright - the side effects of urethane - "moving units" 2004

p: 54

element whistlestop

This wasn't so much an Element tour, as it was a brief day out with the boys and as such there isn't really much of a story to tell. They came, they skated South Bank, they went to Romford and they were gone again curbed by the lash of Pan-European tour schedules.

Element European TM Christian laid it out for me on the phone:

"We started with Paris on the Monday and then we picked up two tour vans and took the Euro tunnel to London to do a demo at Southbank on Wednesday. From there we travelled back on the Eurostar to Brussels on Thursday night where we did another demo at Zomitz on the Friday. We then sped cross country to Holland two days later to do another demo in Rotterdam. We then drove to Cologne, Germany on the next day for another demo. We stayed in Germany for 3 days and then back to Paris where we started out from. Pretty hectic for 12 days!"

TOUR STATS:

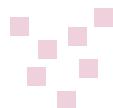

RIDERS: Tech Townsend, Brent Aitchley, Colt Carson and Jake Rupp.

NON-RIDERS: Christian (Euro TM), Ryan Dewitt (US TM), Anthony Clairval (AU), Rimmel, Luke Ogden, (Thrasher Photographer), Philippe Lallement (Euro Element Head Instructor), Mark Falkenstein, (Element webmaster) and of course, our very own Leo Sharp, English rider; Chris Gibbs, Lucien Clarke.

TOTAL ROAD KILOMETRES: Approximately 2500 km TOTAL SKATEBOARDS USED/BROKEN: Roughly 10 boards per rider.

Colt takes advantage of the ever changing face of the Southbank and pulls a flip ollie out of his bag. Sep: Lins

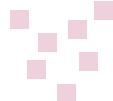

PRESS MOVING UNITS
SIDEWALK - SEPTEMBER - 2005

QUICKFIRE WITH JAKE RUPP
How long have you been interested in Yoga?
Ten years.
Do you follow any particular school of Yoga or is it just kind of mix and match until you find something that works?
A true blend.
How does it help with your skating?
It keeps the body loose and the mind tight.
Can you give us a few brief Yoga tips for any stiff and weary skaters suffering in the cold wet British winter?
Breathe. Listen. No time is too late to start.
You're just get married I believe, how does your wife feel about your constant travelling?
She knows we have to eat somehow.
Describe what skateboarding brings to your life please Jake.
Skating is my life. Life is skating. Everything in between.

QUICKFIRE WITH COLT CANNON
So what's this I hear about you owning a frat house in a college town, is that correct?
I would have to say that I'm a few legs short of being a frat-house, but I like the sound of it.
So you live the life of a frat boy despite not actually attending the college then?
For sure. Parties non-stop and girls everywhere I turn between the ages 18-23. Result.
How's the backyard mini ramp coming along? Is it finished yet?
The ramp is finished and amazing. So psyched I got it.
But don't you live in a house full of non-skaters? What the hell do they make of your backyard monolith?
Both of my roommates are psyched. They come out with a few girls and watch me and some friends skate. Good times.
Whenever your name is mentioned in US mags there's generally always some comment about Britney Spears or some other pop music reference. Are you really into that sugar-coated music or is there a strong undercurrent of irony that people are missing here?
I've battled this question for a long time. The fact is I like sugar coated music just as much as I like mint covered music. If it sounds good, I'll listen to it. By the way are the Spice Girls getting back together?
QUICKFIRE WITH BRENT ATCHLEY
You were sponsored as a super young kid & before Brent, how come it took so long for you to emerge into the media spotlight?
I just skated and someone noticed me.
Do you think skaters born and bred in Oregon have kind of a different exposure to what skateboarding is from an early age because of how self-reliant the scene is?
Definitely, way different.
What's your favourite Burnside local?
Lam.
What did you think of the 70's park (Ramfond) that Lee took you to?
Definitely sick as f*ck.
Was this your first trip to Britain? What did you make of it?
Yes it was my first trip and we had nothing but good times!
Where's next on the agenda?
Germany demo...skated.

PRESS MOVING UNITS

TRANSWORLD SKATEBOARDING - MARCH - 2006

WARM-UP SPOT SMALL TALK...

EMERICA'S INJURED RESERVE LIST

Heath Kirchart (below) was hit by a car crossing the street in front of the Emerica Mansion II where he lives. Heath's body bounced the windshield on its way toward the stratosphere, but he was lucky to land back on Earth with only a broken collarbone. Fellow Emerican Bryan Hermans gave himself a compound fracture (that's where the bone protrudes through the skin) in his leg while riding his dirt bike in the desert. Careful, boys! photo: TRENKA

HABITAT'S BLOG CABIN

Be sure to check out habitatatfieldtag.com to monitor the progress of Habitat's new video, 2xHabitat (featuring Fred Goll, Frontside nosegrind), that will be out later this year. There are already some amazing clips up. While you're at it, get your hands on the Argot Road/Kalis In Peace special holiday DVD from the Sest that features a full Josh Kalis part and Habitat's UK Tour (the one featured in our February issue). Kalis' part marks Greg Hunt's first project since taking the reigns of the upcoming Alien Workshop video. photo: BARTON

HELLO BUCK BUCK

Joey Breznak's pro model on Cliché, along with their new video, Hello Jojo, will be out any day now. Look for a Grind King limited-edition Hello Jojo/Cliché custom truck as well. And after being rowed for a bit, Andrew Bishop is officially on the team.

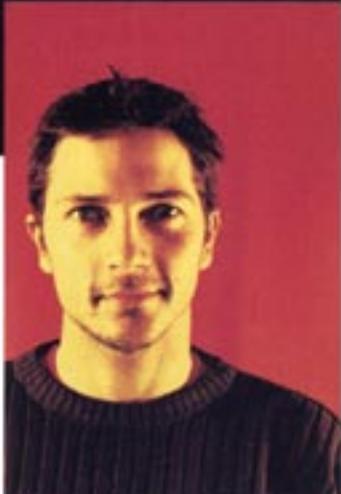

NEW ERA FOR THE LABEL

Black Label made some serious team cuts and let go of Ben Gilley, Kristian Svitak, Jim Gagne, Giovanni Vidal, and John Potts. Potts was quickly picked up by Creature, and Svitak is rumored to be starting his own board company.

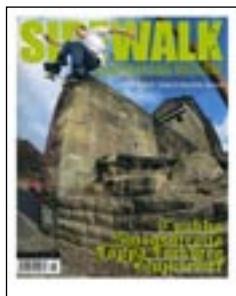

LEE "AVERS" MATASI REST IN PEACE

We're sad to report that Vancouver, Canada local skater Lee Matasi was gunned down on the streets of his hometown. Lee was such a positive and creative influence in the Vancouver scene that a D.I.Y. skate spot under Hastings and Highway 1 was dubbed "Leeaside." Lee's sister is renowned Villa Villa Cola skater Alison "Nugget" Matasi. A memorial that featured his artwork was held at Anti Social in December.

380 transworldskateboarding.com

PRESS MOVING UNITS
SIDEWALK - JUNE - 2006

A sequence of 12 black and white photographs showing a skateboarder performing a trick on a set of concrete steps. The sequence captures the skateboarder's movement from approaching the steps to the peak of the trick and landing back on the ground. The background shows a paved area with some graffiti on the concrete structures.

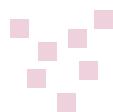

FOURSTAR

ANDREW CARRILL, BENJAMIN HOWARD KOSTON LADD PINE MAURICE SCHLAF & OUR NEW UK REPRESENTATIVE ANDREW BROPHY

CLOTHING

www.fourstarclothing.com Revival T + 392 7575 3336 F + 392 7575 3331

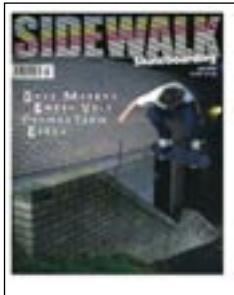

A small Union Jack flag icon is positioned next to the word "BROPHY".

copyright - the side effects of urethane - "moving units" 2004

p: 58

PRESS MOVING UNITS
SIDEWALK - JULY - 2006

ALLIE

Now that the video is finally finished, what's next on your agenda? More of the same, I've already started filming for a Zine video that's dropping around Christmas time. Out of all the places that you visited during the process of putting "It's Time" together, which was your favorite and why? To be honest I didn't really travel at all to film for the video. Most of the footage is my part in spots near my house. Which trick/line worked you the hardest? They're all hard and they all worked me. I suck. What's your favorite memory from the whole process? Falling on a ledge so hard would stop filming and we could leave that terrible spot. You'll see it on the DVD, maybe it'll make more sense now. Which spot from the DVD do you never want to see again? Clipper ledge. I'm over it. How was your brief jaunt around Britain? Good with lots of houses and not much rain for once. If you could have had any track for your video part, with no limits on cost or on how ridiculous it might have been what would you have picked? No need I got the song I wanted! What's the biggest filming cliché of them all that has actually been proven true during the filming of "It's Time"? Good question but you should ask someone else about that.

DURRANT

So now that this video project is over, what's next? Pretty much work on getting my Popstar part done, it's due pretty soon. Out of all the places that you visited during the process of putting "It's Time" together, which was your favorite and why? Well, living in Australia I didn't get the chance to go on a lot of trips. The Europe tour last year was pretty sick though, so many sick spots. Which trick/line worked you the hardest? Laughing probably the last thing I tried to film in the States before getting kicked out of the country. I just left that one dangling... What's your funniest memory from the whole process? There are too many to remember, anything with Windsor or Coll is a laugh. Tell us one thing that nobody will know about the process behind getting this video together? For me one thing was basically getting banned from traveling to the U.S. for overstaying one day on a trip there, so I had to do most of my filming back home but I don't think that's bad or anything. Which spot from the DVD do you never want to see again? I don't know, maybe the Lake Forest double set. How has the UK tour been? Boxes and rain as usual! Yeah it's been good. It's only the start of a whole Europe trip so we still have about a month to go. The rain here in the UK definitely works though.

King of the BMX check DVD! Dennis Durrant rips into one at SB. Ossieff, naked. Photo: Lee.

"the last thing that I tried to film in the States before getting kicked out of the country. I just left that one dangling."

Dennis Durrant about squeezing one in

© 2006 Moving Units

PRESS MOVING UNITS
KINGPIN EUROPE - JULY - 2006

Taking the rough with the smooth, treacherous office in.

Silhouetted switch backside nose bluntslide. ecc.

Do you feel you will return to NYC soon?
Yeah hopefully but this time with a London crew.

I asked kids who have passed through the shop what questions they'd like you to answer so answer as you will. These were the most sensible.

1) What made you get into skateboarding?
My neighbour five doors down. He would skate outside my house and then me and my brother and our friend started.

2) What's your favourite trick?
One I like is the backside 50-50. Personally I would claim Switch nosegrind.

INTERVIEW jessica

